Yes. Just me, my meat and Linux...

I'm using Woody to my best advantage right now.
Woody is a very strong, stable distribution from Debian which can take quite a beating. Best of all, Woody takes only 30 minutes to get going on a bare PC platform.
All you need is a good nic card!

You might think about all this the next time your in

That was a tracer-route, but I don't think anyone noticed that the trace never reached the destination. I just tried one myself, and after a DNS error (intentional redirection) it flip-flopped around in a DC backbone. About the only thing you can tell from that, despite the apparent location in the reverse DNS, is that it's probably East of the Mississippi.

only caught one fish, but they didn't spend their time trolling here. Had they, the kids could have caught a few anti's, but everyone knows that they

Hi Jamey, My name is Woody Parr and I'm up the road in Cornelia. I'm afraid that I'm indirectly responsible for this troll who is badmouthing you at alt.religion.urantiabook. You see he was only there in the first place to attack me.

This idiot is Steven J. Rogovich, 1612 Lake Christopher dr. Virginia Beach, Va. 23464 He followed me to the UB usenet page from alt.radio.pirate He and I (were) both formerly loosely associated with each other in the shortwave pirate radio listening hobby. I USED to be a shortwave pirate but my station has been permanently retired for more than 2 years now. Stevie is still a pirate and is the operator of the station Radio Free Speech. He is also the moderator of a message board at the Free Radio Network < www.frn.net > and goes by the handle of Pat Murphy there. I had a falling out with the people at the FRN a couple of years ago as they became corrupt and were doing so inappropriate things. I dared to open my mouth and openly complain about there stupid activities which since they havn't yet ceased to follow me around the internet anywhere they can and attack me.

Steve is also on the usenet trolling people under the name of Richard Cranium (richardcranus@yahoo.com) He's far too much of a coward to debate anyone using his real name.

This tech fixes radios for the State Police.

It stopped working last Friday. It took me five minutes to find and fix the cold solder joint. After I did that, I put the screws back in it and never touched a VR or coil. Still working a week later. <8

So, Dog-breath, you know Woodbury McCrea Parr, KE4ENX? You know, the guy that got caught jamming repeaters in Atlanta and Cornelia, GA? The one that ran two pirate shortwave stations as "Radio Bob" (RBCN and Radio 8)?? You two could be butt-buddies!

Is that a question? They usually end with a question mark, Georgie-girl.

And you tell me where Rochester is, since you made the claim.

57. Wishing To Cause Interference to A Neighbours Hi-Fi With A CB

During the last number of months I have been the victim of a selfish and thoughtless neighbour who has bombarded me with the sound of a mains Hi-Fi stereo Radio CD/Player at all times of the day and night. I have politely asked the neighbour to turn down this stereo to a level more considerate to his neighbours , my requests have been met with a slammed door.

This neighbour is living on the other side of the wall of a semi-detached house, I was wondering if I might be able to get advice from CB people as to how I could cause best cause interference on this loud and unmerciful hi-fi by means of a CB Radio. Or would a goood walkie talke do the job? If so which frequency? How could I transmitt a signal that would bleed onto his hi-fi without using my voice (Just leave the mike keyed ?)
What would increase the power of my CB/Walkie Talkie to cause him the maximum interference?

I am in the UK and would appreciate advice from CB enthuiasts?

What odd code.

[bx+si].W = 0x67

> call near [bx]

PC = [BX].W

PC -= 0x69, or thereabouts. IIRC, the offset is applied to the PC of the instruction immediately following. It is of course signed. However, I'm not at all sure whether this will assemble to the 8-bit relative form, or the longer 16-bit relative form, or even the quasi-absolute form which goes to offset 0x97 of the current codepage to which the CS descriptor (as of 286 or thereabouts) points.

> mov ax,bx

AX = BX (duh, although Intel in its infinite wisdom might be considered a bit backwards here -- or maybe it's everyone else who's "nonstandard" :-))

> mov al,97h

AL = 0x97

> push byte ptr [5]

SP-=2 [*]
[SP].W = [5].B, sign-extended
(this will eventually become CS, IIRC)

> push bx

SP-=2
[SP].W = BX

> retf 6 (a FAR return, pop 6 bytes)

PC = [SP].W
SP+=2
CS = [SP].W
SP+=2
SP+=6

Without knowing what bx and si are starting with, I can't even begin to fathom what you're trying to accomplish here. To be sure, it does have some elegance -- but to the point of incomprehensibility. :-)

I'm not even sure the forms are correct, as this is 8086-era code;
80386 uses EAX, for example

(As a personal opinion, 'retf 6' is just asking for trouble. Of course all this depends on what one is doing; this could be an interrupt service routine of some sort. And some calling sequences -- e.g., Microsoft's -- require it.)

[.sigsnip]

ObLinux: 'mov ax, bx' would be rendered 'mov %bx, %ax' in the gas notation; 'mov al, 97h' would be rendered 'mov $97, %al'.

Those are the two main differences I can remember offhand.

[*] I'm not sure I'm remembering this correctly; I never can recall which occurs first in a push, the decrement or the store.

I can't see what the big deal is even if he were a felon. There have been people who were put in jail for 10+ years for doing no more that smoking a single joint. Countless people who were jailed for years for civil right issues in the 50's and 60's. My favorite is still G.Gordon Liddy who was jailed for "contempt of congress". If all the people who truely have contempt for congress were incarcerated, we'd have a NATION of people in jails. While I know it is a misquote, I love the story.....When brought before the US Congress to testify in the Watergate hearing Mr. Liddy is credited with this....Do you swear to tell the truth,andd so on.....Liddy: "ABSOLUTELY NOT!"
His actual response was to not speak AT ALL.

Read up on harmonic radiation,but on the same note you would be causing harmful and malicious interference to a FM broadcast which would put you in harms way.
We can't tell you how to screw up his stereo,albeit it is very simple.
You're on your own neighbor.
I believe a little trip behind the woodshed may be in order,ya know what i

Hi Linesman!

Well as you are a UK resident the same as me, you should be well aware of the noise pollution regulations that are now in force. Ring up your local council, and they will point you to the appropriate department. There are serious penalties for pains in the arse such as your neighbour. The council will measure the noise from his home, and if it's above the permitted level, will serve an order on him. If he refuses to comply with the order, they simply knock on his door, and seize his Hi-Fi equipment, and there is f*ck all he can do about it.

Trying to screw up his Hi-Fi with a Cb is near impossible. Now his TV, that's a different matter, that's easy, however, you will screw everyone else's TV up at the same time. I think you will find this will make YOU somewhat unpopular with the neighbours.

IMHO your local council is the first stop.

how important is tuning the antenna for a a CB? How much further would I be able to transmit/receive if it were done? Hate to spend $20 or $30 on something I'm going to use once.

You're going to take the word of a Federal Criminal who ran a pirate sw station under the name of Radio Bob? A no-code tech (KE4ENX) who was tracked down for jamming 2m repeaters in both Atlanta and Cornelia, GA? (check it out for yourself) You are a sap. No wonder nobody likes you.

It's critical to the point where you want the antenna tuned to somewhere in the midrange of the cb channels.
Say channel 19 or 20 or so.
What you don't want, is an antenna tuned to an extremely higher or lower frequency range.
In some fiberglass antennas, you have a short tuning rod on the tip.
Most of the time you don't need to touch it, but it will help to lower your swr as much as possible.
Ideally, a 1.2:1 swr is considered to be damned good.
If you had a 3:1 swr, you'd be getting practically nowhere.
But that's generally a placement problem rather than the antenna being off tuned.
In semi's, which are mostly fiberglass bodies, getting a decent swr is hard some times.

What you really need to use is a marine antenna which is designed to work without a groundplane.
Only problem is, they are expensive.

As a resident of UK, I have viewed this thread with interest and some amusement, but, can someone please help me with a translation. What the hell is a "splatter box"? Is it a bady aligned rig, a poorly tuned linear amp., a multi tone roger beep? What is it? I'd find this thread much more fun if I knew.
Many thanks, keep up the entertainment!

transmitter go right a head. But I'll bet nobody will even notice

Why don't you just inquire with your local police department. I'm sure you guys in the UK have some sort of law that requires people to keep things quite after a certain hour. It would be more fun to see your neighbor getting busted for a noise ordinance violation, and only requires a simple phone call on your part.

Leland...

I'm hardly arguing for "freeband" anything. However, from a technical point of view, that 250kW is spread over 4.5 MHz. If you choose a narrowband chunk of that channel, and depending on how far you and the other guy are from the transmitter itself (square of the distance, remember?) you can very easily compete.

Any of you guys out there in Illinois also a ham radio operator?
I just looked at the state DMV License fee page and saw a listing for "Amateur radio permit.....$5.00".
Huh?
Since when does the state issue amateur radio call signs?
As this falls under the jurisdiction of the FCC, I don't see how a state can get away with requiring residents to also pay them a fee as well.
Sounds like political bullshit to me.

1.5:1 is considered to be ok. You should get at least that right out of the box.
2:1 or higher generally shows you have other problems.
Such as wrong coax, a break in the coax, or even a bad location on the vehicle.

Linesman, not a good idea ... however, I have also been subject to unreasonably loud music here in Rochester, NY. A 600 watt entertainment center, a bunch of Bose speakers, and a 200 watt sub-woofer has solved my problem. Oh, along with some John Phillips Sousa. It worked wonders. Nothing like 15 or 20 minutes of LOUD march music to get the point across (bass to shake the rafters helps as well).

Checking the site further, it appears that the permit may be referring to allow you to use your call sign as the actual license plate.

barry,
your comparison of Liddy to the majority of Americans is not on target at all. Afterall, Liddy was, in fact, one of the Watergate plumbers. I respect the fact that he shut up, and I agree about the contempt the average citizen has for elected officials, but the difference between Liddy and that average American is that the average American does not conspire with the president to spit in the face of the constitution. Also, the average American, in spite of things getting weirder every day, is not 2 sandwiches short of a full picnic, like Liddy demonstrably is.

No dr_doodah5000...it is actually a hoot. You keyqueens have such a short memory that you recycle your old attacks. It's as dumb as if some modern army, recalling their ancestry, decided to fight with bone knives and rocks.

I even tell you guys how to fight and you don't listen. Sheesh. It's like giving Saddam the atom bomb and an owners manual, but he's to illiterate to read.

True, but that was then and this is now. The social costs of crack can be seen in any newspaper. Chapwomans admission even cited the personal and monetary losses and emotional suffering in his life. Not a fair comparison at all. Disingenuous, Barry.

I have responded with a modicum of polite response to trainedpuppets posts.

I don't really care, but if you want to talk nice and civil we can. I won't change my opinion or expect you to change yours, but in civil discourse it happens that an opinion has a ring of truth, I expect that we <whole NG> will concede the point.

Dont EVEN think we are worried about losing ISP's or stuff like that. Nickel a pound and gettin cheaper. We TRULY want to see the intelligence level of you keyclowns. The idea being, you keyclowns complain so much about the dissing and name calling, let's see if your words mean ANYTHING except when the AntiBoys diss YOU. If it isn't a corrupt double standard things should be pretty peaceful round here.

AntiBoys will declare the preceding to be in effect as of 12:01 AM Monday, September 2, 2002. All ya have to do is be civil to accept. If ya don't...well...hell...you can just keep the status quo. Fine by us.

Twenty bucks, payable in cash or paypal...on this bet: Keyclowns will be the first to break the proposed treaty. Fire off all the ready ammo now, so your carriers are empty at midnight. Whoopie.

If you keep it simple and just be cool even before midnight, We antiboys have a special reward for the keyclowns. <not something nasty...something good>

This is a no BS proposal, but you decide.

NO INSULTS FROM ANYBODY!! THAT MEANS ALL OF US!

I think you're defeating the purpose of co-phasing if ya try and place them that close together (5-6ft.)
They have been known to work correctly when placed closer than 9ft. apart but you're pushing the envelope with that setup.
Co-phased antennas tend to support their own ground plane or should i say they help to improve a lack of ground-plane.
But the ground-plane issue will not be your main problem in this case.
Go here....http://firestik.com/
I honestly think you would be better off using the old bridge-banger (9ft.whip)right in the middle of your headache rack.....

As long as they stay down there on 28015 khz and keep away from 28015

Gee, all the way to Georgia? Wow. I assume you're overseas in Asia or Trying to diffuse the focus a bit? Get the spotlight off you and onto someone else? Sorry. Won't work, Steven. You been busted here. All anyone has to do is read the archives in alt.radio.pirate. You post there under the Richard Cranium account too. And then there's this:

No, you're Steve Rogowski of RADIO FREE SPEECH allright. Woodbury is your fellow pirate radio op that you flamed until he ID'd you. Your troll style was pretty much the same that newsgroup, no matter what name you use. Best thing is, it's all in the alt.radio.pirate archives for anyone to read.

Yep, lots of states will issue you a plate with your amateur call, you have to show you amateur license to apply. In Texas they put the words "texas radio opr" above the callsign.

Dave, don't laugh. I remember one time about 20 years ago a number of us went to a nightclub. We knew the guy playing organ (Denny Gill, recently deceased) who used to sub for Doug Duke (another Hammond organist). Those guys could be absolutely hillarious. We were enjoying the evening when some young gal came - uh - 'bouncing' in from the bar area. "we want to dance at the bar" she exclaimed. Denny simply responded "I'd like a drink at the organ". Denny then proceeded to do a good 15 minutes or more of CHURCH music! The tears were streaming down our faces. He got his point across. As far as Doug Duke goes, there was one time he wandered (perhaps 'stumbled' might be a better term) into a nightclub and was dismayed that folks weren't paying attention to the organist (Janie Poray). He walked up to the organ, sat down next to Janie who was trying to say 'hello' to Doug, pulled out all of the drawbars, put his foot all the way into the expression pedal, and proceeded to play 'the old rugged cross'. Those two were something else. Great folks, too.

Yep, it is. This is NOT my post from last year! I just got back from visiting Andy Jackson's house around Nashville. I encourage ALL visitors to Nashville to go see it and spend the 2 hours to see the house of the one who THREW OUT the Federal Reserve System of the 1800's !

I bought a book there that applies to my post. It is a reprint of the 1844 edition of the 1832 book called "The American Frugal Housewife" by Lydia Maria Child. READ THIS: (My comments in brackets)

"The good old HOME HABITS of our ancestors are breaking up (CB Base station use?) --it will be well if our virtue and freedom do not follow them! It is easy to laugh as such prognostics,- and we are well aware that the virtue that we preach is considered almost obsolete,- but let any reflecting mind inquire how decay has begun in all republics, and then let them calmly ask themselves whether we are in no danger, in departing thus rapidly from the simplicity and industry (work) of our forefathers."

"Nations do not plunge at once into ruin- governments do not change suddenly- the causes which bring about the final blow, are scarcely perceivable in the beginning; but they increase in numbers, and in power; they press harder and harder upon the energies and virtue of a people; and the last steps only are alarmingly hurried and irregular. A republic without industry, economy, and integrity. is Samson shorn of his locks." It goes on.

Workers of the world: GET A JOB ! Sam Cooke was right! Don't know 'nuthin about history! We will be doomed to repeat it! What does this have to do with CB's? The less you work, the less $$$ you'll have for CB's. Unless you are in the socialist BUM crowd of N8, McVooble, and the "slamma wanna be a NWO wrestling mamma" crowd of CB thugs, which proudly get their welfare checks on da 3rd of da month!!

Most likely a fee for an amateur callsign 'vanity plate'. We have 'em in New York. I used to have a vanity plate (although not a callsign plate). I think it used to be $50.00 for a two year period. The amateur callsign plates are available at a lower charge, but I'm not sure what it is. Obviously, the state has no choice as to what the callsign will be, they will issue you a plate with your current amateur radio callsign (which, of course, is assigned by the FCC).

Um, how does this make labor day a communist holiday? Most of us work pretty hard and enjoy a three day weekend once in a while - and I'm a capitalist pig (oink oink).

BTW - at times you observe a particular practice as communist, when in fact it is more socialist. Do you understand the difference?

I'm not sure about the ground. It's probably sufficient. Make sure to check SWR as soon as you're done.

Your truck is not wide enough to allow the antennas to be spaced the proper 102" apart. A single antenna will work better on that truck. Dual antennas do look cool, though! :)

Everybodys approach here is entirely wrong....
Maybe this person playing the music considers it a hobby.SOoooooooo I probably would suddenly develop an interest in High voltage electrical discharge apparatus.I would get me a big ol neon sign transformer (about 20,000 volts) attach some straightened coat hangers to it and make a big ol Jacobs ladder and put it up next to the wall and watch the sparks climb and listen to his speakers pop as they are heavily modulated by the most ragged sound/rf pulses known to man....Just a thought

I had a neighbor who would throw parties for ANY reason - like "My kid got a "C" on his test! Woo Hoo!". They were incredibly loud most of the time. Obnoxious? They had a (no kidding) two-story high inflatable scooby-doo in the front yard full of little balls for the kids to jump and play in. They even had a live band in the back yard once.

Early on, they had a pretty decent rack stereo in the living room. The kids would crank this thing up when the parents were gone. I could not get them to turn it down. At the time, I had a little 15 watt solid state guitar amp. I would set it up in the window sill, crank it up and spew noise to my hearts content. This got them to either shut their windows, or turn it down. All was well. But then...

...they bought a bigger stereo. I just couldn't shut them down anymore. I needed more power. I went down to Guitar Center and picked up a Fender Hot Rod Deluxe (all tube). This sucker is LOUD. Oh my God. My wife claims she can feel it in her chest standing in the street in front of the house with all of the windows closed. Anyway, back to my neighbors. I pushed the amp over to the window, and opened it. I hooked up every effects pedal I owned. If the amp or the pedal had a knob, it got turned to the right. My amp goes to "12" (Hee Hee, anybody remember Spinal Tap?). I plugged in the SG, took the amp off standby and lo and behold you'd swear a freight train rolled through the house. I played the most evil, sinister crap I could muster out of six strings. It sounded absolutely awful. It sure was loud, though. When I was finished, my neighbors had turned the music down and shut their windows. I went over and told them if they would like to try and get louder, I will promptly go down to Guitar Center and buy a Marshall full stack (audible a couple of blocks over) It's only money, and I've got alot more of it than they do. I never had a problem again.

Hello John:

Let me disagree with you here, without gettin all mad at me.

Since mobile installations are as different as the day is long, having a SWR of 2 to 1 isn't always a bad SWR. And will work pretty well. At a SWR of 6 to 1 you will lose approx. 3 dB of half the power, plus the loss in the coax. So 2 to 1 SWR isn't all that bad.

One thing that escapes a lot of Techs is that most all mobile antennas will NOT achieve a perfect SWR of 1 to 1. Seeing a SWR of 1.2 or 1.3 to 1, tells me I am done. However with an additional Impedance Matching device, that isn't a common place thing, will allow a perfect SWR of 1 to 1, but the additional hardware isn't really justified, unless U just have to have, and it makes you fell all warm and comfy inside. And you don't want to blow your 157 Pill amp up.

On the other hand most CB Mobile Antenna installations will achieve a lower SWR, just by following the manufactures installations, but not always. And the 2 to 1 SWR can be a indicator there is something wrong. It kind of sets on the fence there. So a experienced Tech will probably look the antenna installation over with a 2 to 1 SWR, but won't take a lot of time doing it.

A bad location of mounting the antenna on the vehicle will cause a worse SWR, agreed.

Open or shorted Coax will show a much higher SWR, from my experiences.

Jay in the Great Mojave Desert, ... just down the road ah ways from the fillin station.

I was discussing loud neighbor problems with a friend of mine, who is a police officer. The conversation went like this:

Cop: "Do you know where their fuse box is?"
Me: "Ya."
Cop: "Is it on the outside of the house?"
Me: "Yup."
Cop: "Do they have a lock on it?"
Me: "I don't think so."
Cop: "I don't see what the problem is..."

Martin,
It just depends on how well the 'System One' makes electrical contact with the rest of the vehicle. More than likely, the 'ground' will be just fine, and if not, then you may have to do some additional bonding.
'Doc
PS - This doesn't say anything about how well the 'dual' antennas will work for you.

Mad Dog, thanks. I have a little portable Radio Shack receiver, I don't remember the model number. I tried turning down the squelch, that's the only control I have on the radio, and it doesn't seem to help. I haven't tuned the antenna yet, would that make a difference?

My friend you are suffering from what we call........
Front End Overload. The incoming signal is too strong for receiver to decode therefore it sounds garbled.
Turn down your receive (rf) gain until the signal is clear enough to understand,it 's as simple as that.....
The good news is you have a powerful receiver.

TSH,
More than likely it's 'over-load', just too strong of a signal and your radio can't handle
it. Disconnect the antenna, you'll probably hear them just fine. 'Course, don't try to talk back to them without the antenna!
One 'trick' that used to be fairly common is to use a #47 light bulb on a short piece of coax for the antenna. If you were just a few yards distant (following someone on the highway, etc.), it would work just fine.

That IS the problem--Wilson and Rat Shack items! Go to your Independant CB shop and get a Uniden CB (PC-66) and a Hustler magnet mount. Problem will be fixed then. If yo is poe, just get the Uniden first.

I can think of three possibilities:

1. They are overloading your receiver, in which case you should turn down your RF gain;

2. Your antenna is crap and you are getting funny near-field effects, which can be solved with a better antenna;

3. Your antenna is mounted in such a way to cause this to happen, like on a fiberglass truck canopy, or just above the back window of an ACM Gremlin.

My guess is #1.

Hello TSH:

Its a real possibility that the radio overloads its front end, when other mobile stations are very close to ya.

What type radio do you have. I have seen this overloading problem on quit a few cheap CB radios.

Nope,in fact it may make it worse if the antenna is way out of tune.
The only alternatives you have are changing radios or internally adjusting rf gain or adding a inline signal attennuator which would be rather extreme but would actually work quite nicely once mastered........

Could be, I have never seen a vulgar amateur call sign license plate, but then the FCC is somewhat picky about issuing vulgar call signs. Did see a personalized plate of "BOOBS", and yes the lady driving could live up to the claim.

Leland, unless that guy has a police department FAR more responsive then ours, he'll be out of luck on that. It usually takes a few HOURS around here for noise complaints, they often don't show for misparked cars (including ones blocking your driveway). They show up only if a gun is involved. So, it isn't only the FCC that is lax on enforcement.

Likely an inexpensive receiver (often made in China) that is suffering from overload (too much signal for it to handle).

Let me set the record straight about William "Rabbit Ears" Flippo. He had plenty of chances after receiving numerous warnings and was even arrested several times before it landed up in federal court. I live approximately five miles south of this individual and his interference which went on for years was not only 10M & 2M but also marine channels and VHF public safety. If Mr. Flippo was so concerned for the welfare of this family he should have paid attention to the many warnings before the case escalated to a federal case. Some people need to learn the hard way and William "Rabbit Ears" Flippo is one of them.

I was thinking more along the line of an indoor dipole placed on the wall closest to the stereo. A legal radio should be able to induce enough into the wires to interfere. Some repositioning of the dipole may help to maximize this effect. Use AM or SSB. FM will be minimally effective.

A woman was waiting in the check-out line at a shopping center. Her arms were laden with a mop and broom and other cleaning supplies.

By her actions and deep sighs, it was obvious she was in a hurry and not happy about the slowness of the line.

When the cashier called for a price check on a box of soap, the woman remarked indignantly, "Well, I'll be lucky to get out of here and home before Thanksgiving!"

"Don't worry, ma'am," replied the clerk. "With a good tail wind and that brand new broom you have there, you'll be home in no time."

Got Digitech. Got Dunlop. Got Dallas Arbiter. Ain't got Pod. :)

Actually, I rarely ever use my effects pedals. They muck up perfectly pristine tube tone. I do use the wah alot, though.

This has got me to thinking...I have noticed that two similar amps - one being tube and one being solid state - rated the same in terms of wattage are widly different in volume. My 15 watt Squire practice amp was a little louder than a trumpet. A 15 watt Mesa Boogie combo amp (tube) I tried out was loud enough to stand the hairs on my arm on end. My compnent stereo system is 30 watts per channel and pretty dang loud. My Hot Rod Deluxe (tube) only has an additional 15 watts on the stereo and is absolutely deafening. Apparently, there is more to volume than wattage. At first, I figured it was a speaker thing. So while in a guitar store I grabbed a Marshall cabinet and plugged it into two amplifers identical in wattage - one tube, one with transistors. No matter which two amplifiers I decided to compare, the tube one was always much louder.
Any idea why that is?

This gets me to thinking even more: To me, the difference in sound between tube and solid state guitar amps is like night and day. The tube amps sound much warmer. When driven to saturation, they REALLY shine.
Solid state amps have a harsher sound. This makes me wonder about tube radio gear. I have a very discerning ear. Call me an audiophile. Will I hear a difference? How about tube mics? I think they make vocals in recordings sound fantastic. What if I tried one on a radio? Hmmmm....

There was a man who had worked all of his life and had saved all of his money and was a real miser when it came to his money. He loved money more than just about anything, and just before he died, he said to his wife, Now listen. When I die, I want you to take all my money and put it in the casket with me because I wanna take my money to the after-life with me." And so he got his wife to promise him with all of her heart that when he died, she would put all of the money in the casket with him.

Well, one day he died. He was stretched out in the casket, the wife was sitting there in black, and her friend was sitting next to her. When they finished the ceremony, just before the undertakers got ready to close the casket, the wife said, "Wait just a minute!'

She had a box with her, she came over with the box and put it in the casket. Then the undertakers locked the casket down, and they rolled it away.

So her friend said, "Girl, I know you wasn't fool enough to put all that money in there with that man. "

She said, "Listen, I'm a Christian, I can't lie. I promised him that I was gonna put that money in that casket with him."

"You mean to tell me you put that money in the casket with the man?"

"I sure did," said the wife. "'I wrote him a check. "

I replied, "I'm late for work."
"Oh yeah," said the cop, "what do you do?"
I responded, "I'm a rectum stretcher."
The cop said "What.....a rectum stretcher, and what does a rectum stretcher do?"

I said, "Well, I start with one finger, then I work my way up to two fingers, then three, then four, then my whole hand, then I work until I can get both hands in there and then I slowly stretch it until it's about 6 foot wide."

The cop asked me, "What the hell do you do with a 6 foot asshole?"

I simply replied, "You give him a radar gun and park him on top of a bridge..."

Looking to install a CB in the motorhome.

1. Price unimportant.

2. Reception and sound quality of primary importance.

3. Primary use is to lurk while truckers discuss traffic ahead.

4. Would like to broadcast a quality signal but don't need a lot of range. A mile or two should be enough.

Have used CB for years but know next to nothing about the radios. Don't even know the difference/advantages/disadvantages of AM, SSB???? Don't understand this "export" thing you guys talk about????

The MH has a preinstalled antenna on the roof but it's probably junk. It can be laid flat to install a cover on the MH but is about 30 inches tall when raised. Overpass clearance is an issue as the roof of the MH is about 11 feet high.

So, what do you CB guys think? Which radio..... aftermarket microphone or stock..... a better antenna????

Thanks for any advice you'd care to provide.

Butch

The PC-68 Uniden is the best lowest cost CB for a motorhome that you can get. I have been doing motorhome CB's & antennas for over 23 years now. I have a 3' antenna that will work better for you. E mail me direct for details.

I've been looking and haven't found anything credible to support your claim that labor day has communist roots. You cannot make a statement and then burden others with proving you right (i.e. "Go research the history of Labor Day"). Rather, it would be better for you to state specifically why you believe Labor Day is rooted in Communism. When stating why you believe Labor Day is rooted in Communism, it may serve you well to refrain from substituting 'dat' 'dem' and 'da', for 'that' 'them' and 'the', respectively. Substitutions like that make you appear unintelligent. If that's what you're going for, you're doing a fantastic job.

In my research, I did find this:

"Come unto me, all ye that labour and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest"
~Matthew 11:28~

Well, I've labored all year and am feeling heavy laden. This Labor Day I'm coming unto him, and he's going to let me kick my feet up. :)

What do you think about that?

Alan S.

IF you research the history of Labor day, you will find that it is UN Biblical and does have communist roots and IS a commie holliday. I believe the scripture that you are looking for that applies is in Proverbs that basically says: A folding of the hands to rest MAKES POVERTY ! Getting REST from Jesus has nothing to do with doing no work on a commy holliday! Dave!!!!!!!!!!

I took part in a class where the students were taught how to pass the 5 WPM code test in about 30 minutes. They were taught to write down the dots and dashes, and they learned how to build a "decoding chart" by memorizing several phrases where the first letter of each word was the letter for that position in the chart.

Worked well for passing the test (>95% passing). Completely useless for actually operating.

No, he rucruited them on behalf of what was later learned to be a John Dean excersize. Nixon actually had no knowledge of this operation going down. The "plumbers" were in this operation were going after pictures of Deans wife Maureen in the desk of the DNC national chairmans office that weer in a folder of hookers from a call girl agency that was used by the DNC for visiting VIP's. Time for you to go back to school little boy!

Being able to read it and understand it does not make one a criminal. We as citizens of this country have all been given rights that have been and are now being constantly infringed upon.

Also, the average American, in Given Mr. Liddy's level of education, level of success prior to and after the Watergate affair, I'd have to say his "picnic" might only be hampered by ants like you.

I'll type this real slowly so maybe you can comprehend it, Jon: You were not having a conversation with Tim Nebo. You inserted yourself into a conversation between the late Richard McCollum and Tim and got all sensitive and defensive. Maybe you should bow out of it yourself.
I suspect you owe Tim an appology as well, but we all know that will never happen.

You have no "integrity", Jon, and you never will as long as you take it upon yourself to interrupt polite conversation.

OK, give some references to this history of Labor Day, and just what is unbibical about it? You religious nuts can read the strangest things in to just about everything. Do you celebrate the birth of Jesus at Christmas? Did you know that Jesus was not born on December 25?

I see you are unable to even cite scripture accurately. Wow. I give up. I'm not going to research anything further than I have. I'll just conclude that you're off your rocker and out of your tree. If you are implying that people, who hold ham licenses, should be somehow
held to a higher moral standard than
the "common man", then that would be faulty logic. A ham license is only a "permit" to use radio, it is not a
"badge of morality".

If you are implying that people, who

be faulty logic. A ham license is only
a "permit" to use radio, it is not a

AKA Echo or reverb. Sends your mike input out through the speaker, which in turn is picked up again by the mike giving your actual output an echo effect.

Cobra makes good quality radios under $75 as does uniden.
But uniden ocassionally has problems with certain cheapie models.
I'm sure most do every now and then.
I'd shop around in a wal-mart before buying one in a truckstop.
For the antenna, a single unit mounted on the west coast mirror will work just fine.
Just make sure you mount up on the top, and not in the middle.
If your MH has a metal roof, get a 50lb magnet mount antenna from radio shack.

Those damn things you almost need a pry bar to break loose.

One of the biggest differences I have seen in audio is in speakers.
Low-wattage speakers sound louder than high-wattage speakers, despite being the same impedance and driven from the same amp. Beats me why, and I don't think it really matters as long as you like the sound. Too many people are too concerned with 'wattage' -- kinda like keyclowns.
Hmmm... maybe the difference in volume is that the solid-state amps are measured in "Bird watts"...?

I'm sure you have read the almost famous 'Tube Audio FAQ' by now. The bottom line is that tubes only make a difference in a transducing circuit (i.e, input and output). But you can't tell that to the die-hard tube-junkie who has decided that he absolutely MUST have a 24-channel all-tube mixer.

As far as tube radio gear, the best thing about glass is that you don't have to load the input; that is, as long as you don't draw grid current. And as most audiophiles already know, a good triode is about as linear of a device as you can get. Push-pull triodes are even better. (BTW, the 'warm' sound comes from the 2nd harmonic typical of triodes, or so that's the current theory.) The tetrode and pentode are less linear than the triode and will cause more unwanted distortion. The transistor is, at best, a crappy pentode. Feedback can help clean up a transistor for audio freqs, but RF stages (tube or transistor) are usually be open-ended amps because feedback loops at RF need to be rephased every time the radio is tuned. (I should also mention that whenever you hear of 'feedback' being used in an RF amp, it is usually referring to 'degeneration' or 'degenerative feedback', which is not really feedback but more like attenuation that can be used to put more of the signal into the linear operationg region of the active device.)

Tubes and transistors have differences that make each more suitable for any particular job. For audio it doesn't make much difference to me just as long as it's clean. For RF input and output, and for audio compression, I prefer tubes.

The purpose, Clyde, as I have stated many times before, and carefully outlined for you so even Twisty could understand it, was to denounce Timmy's misinformation. You claim to do the same to Voobner, so you shouldn't have any problem with someone else correcting other people's errors. You know, mistakes like saying that there is no such thing as a 'fake' 10 meter radio, or saying that the government is lying when the CFR clearly states that advertising CB amplifiers is illegal. You don't have a problem with me doing that, do you, Clyde?

Well, I'll tell ya what, Clyde, it's obvious that you are going to misinterpret anything that anyone says that you disagree with, much along the same lines as Twisty, so there's really no point in a rational discussion. But I see that you have figured that out already, or else you would be responding to my other replies -- you know, the ones where you have run out of lame arguments.

And what's up with you calling me "Jon"? For the record, my name if Frank Gilliland, and just about every regular in this group already knows that. Some of them even have my address and phone number, even some that don't like me; and I have even bought, sold, and traded radios and parts with a few. I have even given away some parts, but those days are over since not one of them has ever said "thank you"
(with one exception -- Voobner!). If you really want to call me Jon that's fine, Clyde, but there are sure going to be a lot of people snickering at your posts (including me...LOL!).

You are a bitter little man, Clyde, and should get your head checked

A pair of 4 or 5 ft stiks will do nicely.
Just be sure to run a heavy duty ground cable from the mount to the truck body to improve the ground.
All you need for that is some good solid copper wire.
Aluminum doesn't have much of a ground effect though.
You could also make a long bracket that reaches from the truck body to over the rack so you're not mounting onto the rack itself.
Which would then give you sufficient ground.
Perhaps a better ground plane as well.

The Uniden PC 68LTW is very nice. All the knobs are back lighted and the weather alert feature is nice.

I never had a CB without an external speaker and this radio Needs one also.

I can receive at least twice as much with a trunk mount (Hustler) 55 inch antenna compared to a 37 inch antenna. Most trucks mount their antennas on the mirrors don't they?

The worker is Russia was given lip service and nothing more. It is not communistic to salute those of us who can use a rest or just want a long weekend with friends and family.

To be honest, it is quite easy to get a CB up to 28015KHz. I'd pay good money to see someone get one up to 28015MHz! That would certainly be a trick and a half and then some.....

Sounds like a nice idea. Unfortunately I'm sure the outcome will be your camp railing on "the other side" after some one throws an insult. More arguing and bickering. ect ect ect blah blah blah. I'm sure some one will miss your post and then be shocked when they get railed by you for insulting. Hell with out insults all the current threads in this NG will die. Couple decent movies... Forgot something in the descriptions, however... What format are they? They appear to be DVD, however it's hard to tell by the pictures... Really should include the format info (at least in the title) when you are selling something like that. Would probably get more bids & a higher selling price...

No, time for you to get real: Nixon's own words, in the David Frost interview in late 77: "I screwed up, I paid the price." The only little boy here is the one throwing insults, BTW. You really think Nixon would not have hung Dean's ass out to dry if he could have plausibly denied his own involvement? Where is the logic in that? The last thing he wanted to do was resign. He approved every step of it.
Where is your documentation? Maybe from listening to Liddy on the radio or something?

Your attempt to exempt Liddy from plumbers membership is fallacious.
If he is exempted on such a clownish premise then I guess military recruiters are not members of the armed forces, right?

Again, insults do not support an intellectually or logically weak arguement. Liddy advises the public <ON HIS RADIO SHOW> to double tap federal Agents, and you don't think shooting people is crazy? He is demonstrably a nut case, regardless of any insult you may purvey. It is utterly impossible to change the truth with insults, except perhaps in your own mind. When your excercising of such attitude presents itself here in the NG, it just supports the treatise that you are also delusional in the area of your own federal criminality, and have to be so viuperative in order to smooth your own guilt. <although,posession of a functioning conscience is somethingthat is frankly open to question in your case> This smacks of a Dave or Debby type virulence that is not compatible with logical discourse. Have it your way, Barry.

You have offered rude statements without one single bit of logical support. Why do you bother posting just to show that it is difficult for those of your particular persuasion to face reality? Isn't that a bit demeaning?

I dare you to cite references by any reputable source to back up your claims about Liddy and Watergate. You know they do not exist.

Your agreement with dave or debby is all the testimony as to your

Insults from someone who knows he is insulting to support his own lies

I said that Timmy thinks I'm N7VCF, not N7CVF you dyslexic dumbshit!
And I'm neither of those people! Why don't you look up the location of my ISP if you are so interested in who I am and where I live. And just in case you screw up the order of the letters like you did with a simple ham callsign, I'll give it to you in a link that you can just click:

http://www.cet.com

Next, I'm sure Timmy and Randy have saved my picture from my previous website. Compare that to the pictures of N7VCF that are on the web. If you can't see the difference then that would explain why you couldn't get his callsign right!

Hm lets see...you got a 110V generator right?Maybe about a 3 to 5 kw job?I would suggest a Collins 32V3 with all the speech limiting capacitors chopped out and a nice feedback loop around the audio stage and a matching 75A3 receiver......Side mount a whip on opposite sides fore and aft.You did say price was no object and I assume you only care about Am.........with this you can lurk.........

What would you know of logical discourse? You can't get your ass out of the thesaurus long enough to follow a conversation. I can talk about Watergate and bring up many points about it because i know some of the people involved.....Liddy and Nixon included. I still see Gordon from time to time at a local diner here in NJ when he has his mother out to eat and I knew Mr. Nixon since i was a child living very close to his estate in California when I was a child. I was fortunate enough to meet up with him back here in Jersey as an adult and spend some time with him prior to his passing. Talk/Back is a modication done internally that allows you to hear your own voice thru the speaker when you transmit.
There are universal T/B modules available that plug in to the external speaker and P/A speaker jacks but they don't work on every radio.
T/B usually has a bad habit of causing feedback thru the mic. but this can be cured by using a noise cancelling microphone.......
BTW a Connex board is totally different from T/B

The biggest problem with this install is getting an antenna that will work well with the restrictions involved and still be able to talk a few miles. And no.......A 4 pill is not out of the question either. That will be decided on once the rig has been set up and delivered.

I'm not Steve, and you can't even spell his name correctly when it's on the screen in front of you. You are frustrated and desperate, Aanal Aaron!! You proved it yourself. What a maroon!

Only in your dreams, Aanal Aaron. My name is not Steve. And if I've been "traced" to Rochester, how do you rationalize that I'm in VA Beach? Keep guessing!

Apparently Federal Criminals like Woodbury McCrea Parr are credible while other alleged ones aren't? How you pick and choose your sources of information, dimbulb. Real credible. NOT!

Train,

All right!! Thanks.

Just a thought, the Prevost may have an aluminum roof.... I don't know. My Dutch Star has a "rubber" or EPDM(?) roof over plywood on aluminum frames. Could make a big difference on antenna selection, no?

Most of these rigs have an aluminum ladder at the rear. Also, BIG truck style mirrors at the front.

Perhaps mounting the antenna(s) on the ladder or mirrors would work well. Only problem is that we hate to make any penetrations in the roof material of these rigs. If there is an existing though inadaquate antenna perhaps the better antenna could be connected to the CB via the existing antenna hook up?

Run the antenna or antennas from the mirrors, it would be the easiest. If not you'll have to drill and mount it along the sides towards the top of the rig.

I agree... but you have to know when to stop. My rule of thumb is that for stations below 500W output, spending excessive time getting the match below 1.7:1 is not necessary and will not impact performance enough to notice.

What does power output have to do with what your swr should be.

I have a mobile Wilson 2000 CB antenna and some other base antenna at my house.

All I want to do is monitor these frequencies with the scan feature on my tranciever. I will not be transmitting at all while using these antennas.

Is this possible and safe for the radio?

Thanks for your help

Clockwork, Power doesn't have anything to do with SWR, but then, SWR has very little to do with how ~well~ an

I did not see the original, but going to the police first is not the answer. You should talk to them and let them know what they are doing to disturb you. Also talk to all the other neighbors and see if they too are having the same problem, then maybe you all can get together and approach them with the problem. But the last resort should be the police, it just makes for a lousy living situation with your neighbor.

Antennas and radio waves work the same on the Ham bands as they do on any other band. Besides it seems very few on this news group can't even figure out the correct answer to the coax length question much less anything else more technical.

Used to have one twenty years or so ago. Gave it up because of the idiots on the bands.

Until he checks he will never know right? The few minutes it takes to make the call is far quicker than screwing around trying to make something to deliberately interfere with his neighbor's radio, not to mention it will not be confined to just that single neighbor either.

Brian,
Power has nothing to do with SWR. SWR doesn't change because of the amount of power you run, SWR is a ratio.
That ratio stays the same no matter what power level you use. The amount of reflected power can become significant, but, if your equipment is adequate, it should still make no difference. If your feed line won't stand the amount of reflected power present at high power levels, it isn't adequate.

That sort of nonsense got one of my neighbors kicked out of their

Florida Man Gets 15 Months, Huge Fine for Deliberate Interference

Following his conviction, William Flippo--in chains and leg irons--as he was returned to custody in West Palm Beach, Florida, June 19. [Bob Calvert, K4NBC, Photo]

NEWINGTON, CT, Aug 29, 2002--Florida Citizens Band enthusiast William "Rabbit Ears" Flippo will spend the next 15 months in federal prison and have to pay a $25,000 fine for jamming Amateur Radio communications and transmitting without a license. Flippo was convicted in federal court earlier this year on eight misdemeanor counts. The sentence is believed to be a record for convictions of this type.

Federal District Court Judge Daniel T.K. Hurley imposed the sentence August 29 on Flippo, of Jupiter. He had been found guilty June 19 of four counts of operating without a license and four counts of deliberate and malicious interference. Flippo has remained in custody since the guilty verdict and underwent a psychiatric evaluation prior to sentencing. It's not clear if he will get credit for time already served. The judge also said he wants a full financial disclosure from Flippo, who may face other legal actions unrelated to his radio operation convictions.

At the sentencing, Flippo reportedly wept, said he'd turned over a new leaf and claimed he was sole support for his wife and two daughters. None of his family members was in the courtroom for the sentencing, however.

The judge was not persuaded, telling Flippo, 60, that he was old enough to have considered the consequences of his actions. Hurley also alleged numerous incidents of perjury during the course of Flippo's testimony during his June trial, which ran six-and-one-half days. The jury took about a half hour to determine that he was guilty on all counts.

According to trial testimony, Flippo primarily had targeted members of the Jupiter-Tequesta Repeater Group for jamming and regularly interfered with amateur operations, especially on 10 and 2 meters, over an approximately three-year period. Following up on the amateurs' complaints, personnel from the FCC's Tampa District Office visited the Jupiter area at least twice in 1999 and reported tracking the offending signals to Flippo's residence.

Flippo had faced a maximum of eight years in prison--one year on each count--and up to $80,000 in fines. Available opinions were mixed on whether the sentence Hurley imposed was appropriate. Ed Petzolt, K1LNC, who assisted the FCC in gathering evidence and, at one point, had his car rammed by Flippo's vehicle, said he felt Flippo should have received at least three years.

"I thought it was a slap on the wrist," said Petzolt, the 1999 ARRL International Humanitarian Award winner who also testified at the trial. John Criteser Jr, KC4JLY, agreed. "I think he should have gotten more--at least five years," Criteser said outside the courthouse. Other amateurs who attended the sentencing session, including Jupiter-Tequesta club member Bert Moreschi, AG4BV, were satisfied with the penalty, however.

Flippo requested that he be incarcerated at Florida's Eglund Air Force Base, but the decision on where he'll spend his sentence is up to the Federal Bureau of Prisons.

Flippo's federal trial was twice postponed last year after he argued successfully that serious health problems would prevent him from participating. He was unsuccessful, however, when he tried the same tactic during a hearing earlier this year to determine if he was capable of standing trial.

Last year, Flippo was convicted in state court of criminal mischief--also a misdemeanor--after ramming Petzolt's vehicle. He was sentenced to a year's probation and ordered him to dispose of any radio equipment in his possession. A ban on possessing radio gear also had a condition of his federal bond, which Hurley subsequently revoked during the trial.

Federal authorities arrested Flippo in July 2000. The criminal charges of which he now stands convicted covered violations allegedly committed between June 1999 and April of 2000. The defendant already faces a $20,000 fine levied in 1999 for unlicensed operation, willful and malicious interference to Amateur Radio communications, and failure to let the FCC inspect his radio equipment.

Hurley ordered Flippo immediately back into custody to start serving his sentence. Flippo reportedly was led into and out of the courtroom in shackles and leg irons.

Perjury? Ramming a guy's car? Shit, he should have gotten the max.

The '29 depression was caused by the VIPERS that Andy Jackson talk about (European Bankers) that brought back in the Unlawful central bank that Andy kicked out (The Constitution says that only CONGRESS can COIN money (Art. 1 Sec. 10). SO because of the SINS of the people here, the VIPERS came back in in 1913, which CAUSED the depression in '29. You can't blame us POOR people @ the bottom of the ecomomic system, for the strings and problems that were caused at the top. You can blame all for going into big time debt. in the 20's, though. 2 Chron. 7:14 IS the answer. We NEED another Andy Jackson NOW to kick out all the Greenspan thugs! Those thugs in 1917 on Wall Street FUNDED the Bolsheviks. They also funded Hitler too. Read the book by Sutton to expose this.

It IS important as to WHY we have a Communist holliday. There is one in January too to honor the wicked commie MLK. We seen some old book that says that there are JUST 3 American Holidays! JUST 3 ! And I bet that YOU don't even DO one of them! GUESS WHICH ONE: !
(a) George Washington's Birthday
(b) 4th of July
(c) Thanksgiving

I think you guess it! The commies really HATE George, so they "took away" his birthday, and made a "Dead Presidents" day. Most of them dead Prezes got killed by those "Vipers" Andy talked about, or their henchmen. It IS the communists goal to DEBASE The Founding Fathers. WE won't let them DO that, will you?!

So when they skip town, and you can't contact them, you just give up right? Sooner or later you're going to call the local PD in, especially when the person is knowingly writing bad checks, and you got stuck with one or more of them. Face it Tim the world is full of people who could care less about your rights, and making good on a bad check, just as you thumb your nose at FCC regulations. You don't like it much when the shoe gets jammed on your foot, and you're stuck holding the bag. I would like to see your face when the local prosecutor tells you they don't have the time to chase people making a career out of passing bad checks, they have bigger fish to fry, and besides they didn't "hurt" anybody did they? Keep that in mind.

Tools,

I want to ask you something. Just WHY is it OK for truckers to usurp frequencies for which they haven't fulfilled stated and perfectly reasonable requirements? If you think I am the only one watching for intruders on the ham bands, you are mistaken. If y'all wanna run a gadzillion watts, or enough to pop each others' eyeballs out and make 'em sizzle, I don't care so long as you aren't interferring with me. Right now, for the most part, CBers are able to do pretty much as they please on the 40 channels without too much fear of retribution. But NOOOO! That isn't enough! Those who are disrepectful of others and their own country's laws have to take everybody else's as well.
THAT is where I refuse to lay down and play dead. If that makes me a "snitch", well, tough!! Trespass in my yard, or trespass on my frequencies (they are mine and every other ham's by virtue of doing what we were required to do), and I will do what I can to remove you from where you don't belong. Seems perfectly reasonable to me. Now, I'd like to hear why you think it is OK for CBers to wander all over the spectrum with impunity and interfere with the legitimate users.

Tools,

No "hmmmmmm" to it! Illegal operators operating on unauthorized frequencies have NO protection from "interference" from the licensed users of a frequency. What is described below is perfectly LEGAL. I can fire up a few Kc's above 28.085, turn on the old legal limit amp, and diddy bop away on CW. I HAVE done it, and I will CONTINUE to do it when I hear truckers doing their "tan-fer, driver, thar" crap on 10 meters. Why don't you turn us in to rholling@fcc.gov ?
I just hope Riley doesn't hurt himself when he falls out of his chair laughing at you.

Hi Jamey, My name is Woody Parr and I'm up the road in Cornelia. I'm afraid that I'm indirectly responsible for this troll who is badmouthing you at alt.religion.urantiabook. You see he was only there in the first place to attack me.

This idiot is Steven J. Rogovich, 1612 Lake Christopher dr. Virginia Beach, Va. 23464 He followed me to the UB usenet page from alt.radio.pirate He and I (were) both formerly loosely associated with each other in the shortwave pirate radio listening hobby. I USED to be a shortwave pirate but my station has been permanently retired for more than 2 years now. Stevie is still a pirate and is the operator of the station Radio Free Speech. He is also the moderator of a message board at the Free Radio Network < www.frn.net > and goes by the handle of Pat Murphy there. I had a falling out with the people at the FRN a couple of years ago as they became corrupt and were doing so inappropriate things. I dared to open my mouth and openly complain about there stupid activities which since they havn't yet ceased to follow me around the internet anywhere they can and attack me.

Steve is also on the usenet trolling people under the name of Richard Cranium (richardcranus@yahoo.com) He's far too much of a coward to debate anyone using his real name.

Why would that be stupid? Because when I changed my user name at my

it to reflect my new username, and it should be back up eventually.

If I was going to post a fake picture of myself I think I would have picked one that was a bit more flattering. I chose that particular pic because I liked that TV show "Northern Exposure".

Of course it has nothing to do with SWR... but the point is that if you have very high power, the match becomes increasingly critical because of the shear amount of power being relected. That means that if you had a 10% reflection coefficient and you had 4W, then you would have 400mW being reflected. Not a problem... but if you had 1000W, then you would have 100W being reflected and your output stage will have to dissipate an extra 100W. That could be a problem in some designs...

May I interject Scottie, I don't think Leland could modify his UHF/VHF radio to get down to CB Band unless there is some secret CB mod web page somewhere and really what is it any of your concern if they don't use Cb's this is a discussion forum correct? 400 mW could be a problem in some designs. Considering that the output power is, say 70% of the input power (Class C), then 4 watts out means the final must dissipate 1.7 watts (4 watts out = 70% of 5.7 watts into the final -- 5.7 less 4 = 1.7). So if your final is only capable of dissipating 2 watts, then 400 mW of reflected power is going to put it over the top.

Unfortunately there is no standard color coding for microphones. Two leads are easy to identify. One: The shield is the ground lead. Two: The wire with the shield wrapped around it is the audio lead. (Often the audio wire is white; however it may be yellow or red or some other color).
To identify the other wires: you can either look at the switch inside the mic or do some testing with an "ohm-meter" continuity tester. If you have a four wire mic: check between the shield & each unidentified wire to see which connects to the shield in receive & which connects in transmit (PTT switch button pushed in).
If there are 5 wires: do a little experimentation to see which wires connect for receive & which connect for transmit. The wire that connects to each of the other wires (one in receive & the other in transmit) is "common," the others are "receive" & transmit."
Many ASTATIC 6-wire mics have the following colors: White=Audio, Shield=Ground, Blue=Common (put with ground for 4-wire hookups), Red=Transmit, Black=Receive, (Yellow--do not use for most CB's).

Nothing will get hurt. It really doesn't matter if the SWR is 10:1 or so - the reality is that any modern day scanner or receiver has sensitivity far below the ambient noise level, so if you loose 3 dB or more, it won't hurt a bit. BTW, my former neighbor who now lives in Wellsville, NY (over 100 miles away by car - perhaps 80 miles as the crow flies), hears me just fine on the repeaters using nothing but a coathanger stuck in the antenna jack of her scanner.

http://www.pbs.org/newshour/bb/business/september96/labor_day_9-2.html

The observance of Labor Day began over 100 years ago.
Conceived by America's labor unions as a testament to their cause, the legislation sanctioning the holiday was shepherded through Congress amid labor unrest and signed by President Grover Cleveland as a reluctant election-year compromise.
Read about the turbulent circumstances of Labor Day's birth, browse NewsHour segments on labor and the economy, and explore labor-related resources on the Internet.

In an attempt to appease the nation's workers, Labor Day is born
The movement for a national Labor Day had been growing for some time. In September 1892, union workers in New York City took an unpaid day off and marched around Union Square in support of the holiday. But now, protests against President Cleveland's harsh methods made the appeasement of the nation's workers a top political priority. In the immediate wake of the strike, legislation was rushed unanimously through both houses of Congress, and the bill arrived on President Cleveland's desk just six days after his troops had broken the Pullman strike.

1894 was an election year. President Cleveland seized the chance at conciliation, and Labor Day was born. He was not reelected.

In 1898, Samuel Gompers, head of the American Federation of Labor, called it "the day for which the toilers in past centuries looked forward, when their rights and their wrongs would be discussed...that the workers of our day may not only lay down their tools of labor for a holiday, but upon which they may touch shoulders in marching phalanx and feel the stronger for it."
Labor Day: a good-bye to summer
Almost a century since Gompers spoke those words, though, Labor Day is seen as the last long weekend of summer rather than a day for political organizing. In 1995, less than 15 percent of American workers belonged to unions, down from a high in the 1950's of nearly 50 percent, though nearly all have benefited from the victories of the Labor movement.

And everyone who can takes a vacation on the first Monday of September. Friends and families gather, and clog the highways, and the picnic grounds, and their own backyards -- and bid farewell to summer.

http://www.dol.gov/opa/aboutdol/laborday.htm

Labor Day: How it Came About; What it Means

"Labor Day differs in every essential way from the other holidays of the year in any country," said Samuel Gompers, founder and longtime president of the American Federation of Labor. "All other holidays are in a more or less degree connected with conflicts and battles of man's prowess over man, of strife and discord for greed and power, of glories achieved by one nation over another. Labor Day...is devoted to no man, living or dead, to no sect, race, or nation."

Labor Day, the first Monday in September, is a creation of the labor movement and is dedicated to the social and economic achievements of American workers. It constitutes a yearly national tribute to the contributions workers have made to the strength, prosperity, and well-being of our country.

Founder of Labor Day

More than 100 years after the first Labor Day observance, there is still some doubt as to who first proposed the holiday for workers.

Some records show that Peter J. McGuire, general secretary of the Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners and a cofounder of the American Federation of Labor, was first in suggesting a day to honor those "who from rude nature have delved and carved all the grandeur we behold."

But Peter McGuire's place in Labor Day history has not gone unchallenged. Many believe that Matthew Maguire, a machinist, not Peter McGuire, founded the holiday. Recent research seems to support the contention that Matthew Maguire, later the secretary of Local 344 of the International Association of Machinists in Paterson, N.J., proposed the holiday in 1882 while serving as secretary of the Central Labor Union in New York. What is clear is that the Central Labor Union adopted a Labor Day proposal and appointed a committee to plan a demonstration and picnic.

The First Labor Day

The first Labor Day holiday was celebrated on Tuesday, September 5, 1882, in New York City, in accordance with the plans of the Central Labor Union. The Central Labor Union held its second Labor Day holiday just a year later, on September 5, 1883.

In 1884 the first Monday in September was selected as the holiday, as originally proposed, and the Central Labor Union urged similar organizations in other cities to follow the example of New York and celebrate a "workingmen's holiday" on that date. The idea spread with the growth of labor organizations, and in 1885 Labor Day was celebrated in many industrial centers of the country.

Labor Day Legislation

Through the years the nation gave increasing emphasis to Labor Day. The first governmental recognition came through municipal ordinances passed during 1885 and 1886. From them developed the movement to secure state legislation. The first state bill was introduced into the New York legislature, but the first to become law was passed by Oregon on February 21, 1887. During the year four more states ï¿½ Colorado, Massachusetts, New Jersey, and New York ï¿½ created the Labor Day holiday by legislative enactment. By the end of the decade Connecticut, Nebraska, and Pennsylvania had followed suit. By 1894, 23 other states had adopted the holiday in honor of workers, and on June 28 of that year, Congress passed an act making the first Monday in September of each year a legal holiday in the District of Columbia and the territories.

Hey guys and gals, I just got a quick Q this time, are CB radios being used in the trucking business only or are other branches of transportation using them too?
Reason I ask is, we are going on a train trip soon and I will bring my scanner with me but would the CB be any good at picking up any train frequencies?
I'm a total newb at this, so if this is out of whack, you know why :-)

Awaiting the responses,

Radio Frequencies
Of interest to railfans who use scanners to listen to communications between operating crews and Rail Traffic Controllers (RTC). On Canadian National, channel 1 is used for end-to-end communication between engineers and conductors, and for RTCs to contact trains. Channels 2-8 are used by crews calling the RTC, and for communication between the train and the RTC once contact has been established.

On St. Lawrence & Hudson (Canadian Pacific), all conversation between the RTC and train crew normally takes place on the train standby channel. On the RTC call-in channel, one will usually only hear a series of tones indicating that the crew is calling the RTC.

GO Commuter Central is the primary source of non-railway-specific information (passenger relations, GO-specific messages; i.e. not from/between RTC).

CN Channel 1 161.415 MHz Train standby -- all lines ex. Milton
CN Channel 2 161.205 MHz RTC call in -- Lakeshore East (Oshawa - Toronto)
CN Channel 3 160.935 MHz RTC call in -- Stouffville (Stouffville - Scarborough)
Bradford (Concord - Bradford)
CN Channel 4 160.665 MHz RTC call in -- Georgetown (Toronto - Brampton)
Bradford (Toronto - Concord)
Richmond Hill (Toronto - Richmond Hill)
CN Channel 8 161.025 MHz RTC call in -- Lakeshore West (Toronto - Hamilton Jct)
Georgetown (Brampton - Georgetown)

CP Channel 1 161.475 MHz Train standby -- Milton (Toronto - Milton)
CP Channel 3 160.425 MHz RTC call in -- Milton (Toronto - Milton)
CP Channel 6 161.325 MHz RTC call in -- Lakeshore West (Hamilton Jct - Hamilton)
CP Channel 82 160.815 Mhz Train standby -- Lakeshore West (Hamilton Jct - Hamilton)

GO Transit 413.9375 MHz Commuter Central
GO Transit 419.4375 MHz Willowbrook yard

You mean like spreading false information all over a newsgroup about, and making false accusations against, someone that has absolutely nothing to do with the newsgroup (N7CVF), where the information is based on your misspelling of the callsign of another person that has absolutely nothing to do with this newsgroup (N7VCF), which came from a rumor that was started by someone (Twistedhed) who, while in the process of accusing me of being several different people, assumed that because I have the same name as someone else in the same state (with a population of about 5 million people) that the other person must be me?

Yes indeed, Clyde, you sure have LOT'S of credibility! AND integrity! LOL!!!

Hi Jim.

As Tox said, the local council deal with "noise polution".
All you have to do here is contact the local council with the details and they will bring out the measuring equipment. People have had their complete stereo systems taken away.

Councils have ways of dealing with "bad neighbours". I remember a story of one woman who was sent to prison just for feeding the birds. A neighbour complained about the birds constantly crapping on their washing and the mess made by the excessive amount of "bird feed" that was in the womans garden.

Regards,

Peter.

And you whine about:
Amps
Modifications
Watt meters that could measure high power.
Radios which could be used illegally, even if they can also be used legally.
Mention of tubes, even when it means "Cathode Ray Tubes"
Anyone who is not an "Anti Keyclown".

Even if the mention of certain equipment is related to legal (Ham) use, you whine that it is off topic for this group... is that not whining about "usenet etiquette"?

> 2. threaten to report and complain to ISP's, etc.

Apart from your whining, threatening to report people is your only other reason for being here.

Although, there are some differences:
You hide behind several names, fake e-mail addresses, etc.
You seem to be too interested in sexual orientation.
Without us, you would have no reason to be here.

If all the "antis" disappeared from this group, the rest of us would still have a reason to be here... the same reason that we are here now.

If all the non-antis left the group, the only reason for you lot to remain would be for a bit of mutual preening... in public.
It's probably best if we avoid that issue, before the image makes me puke.

Hello,

I'm planning a trip to Alaska (to climb Denali) next year. On the web I found out that it is recommended to use a CB radio for emergency calls to the park rangers. Does anyone know about the regulations for bringing a CB radio from Germany, do you need a licence to bring/use a CB radio ?

Thanks for your help

Bernd

PS Here's what the nps web page states:
"The Citizen's Band (CB) radio is the radio preferred and carried by most climbers. Channel 19 (27.185 MHz) on the CB is monitored by air services and the Park Service in Talkeetna. "

And finally, this is where Twisty proclaims that I'm N7VCF (under the

But this is my favorite: Barely two weeks later Twisty screws up while trying to forge N7VCF (thinking it's me, of course). His mistake was by putting the addy into the "Subject:" field instead of the "From:"

Did I mention that he and pinhead spammed the newsgroup with N7's phone number for several days? with instructions on how to avoid getting traced? That was funny, too, because the first phone number they put up was of someone in the New England area (if I remember correctly). They corrected themselves (much like you did) and then continued posting N7VCF's number while inciting people to harass. You might also be aware that there is a report of this incident with both the FBI and the FCC (phone harassment). So if you really want to carry on with Twisty's delusion that I'm N7VCF then go right ahead, because I'm guessing that all three of you will end up in deep shit. Then you all will find out for sure that I'm not N7VCF -- I'll be the guy you will hear laughing at your asses from the other side of the state!

There is a big debate as to whether it's better to use line-of-sight radios or radios for the lower freqs, but most everyone agrees that the combination of a cell-phone and a GPS device makes most other communication devices obsolete. I have a couple friends that do some climbing in the Rockies and Cascades, and there are three things they always recommend: A cell- or satellite-phone, a GPS device, and an avalanche beacon.

If you are going to browse around in the wilderness I would recommend a satellite-phone; but since you are climbing Denali then you will probably be within line-of-sight of a cell-tower, so a cell-phone should work fine.

If you are in snowy or icy mountains your signal will get bounced around quite a bit, making direction-finding very difficult in an emergency. This is true for almost any radio, and makes having a GPS device almost necessary.

And you probably already know enough not to go up any snow-covered mountain slope without an avalanche beacon.

As far as bringing in a CB from Germany, you need to make sure it's compatible with U.S. radios: i.e, Channel 9 (the emergency channel) is 27.065 MHz, and the only modes allowed here are AM and SSB, not FM.
The hardest part is finding a handheld that will stand up to the harsh environment and still perform well. But handhelds don't perform well regardless. The problem is that the wavelength for CB is around 11-meters, so any handheld CB is going to be electrically short and heavily loaded, and you won't have as much range as you might expect or need. And few, if any, are built for water-resistance and extreme cold weather.

There is no license requirement for CB radio in the US, but 'legally' you must use FCC certified radios. If your's isn't FCC certified you probably won't get hassled as long as you operate it according to the US rules (which many Americans ignore anyway). Getting it into the US is another issue: you might have a problem because of recent security issues, so that's something else you should check into.

Anyway, I recommend you bring the CB, but leave it at the bottom of the mountain; rent or buy a cell-phone, a GPS device, and of course an avalanche beacon. If you don't have your own equipment, many climbing outfitters will rent what you need locally.

Hope that helped.

I don't know where you live. But I live in a small city of 50,000+.
There are less than a dozen CB antennas mounted on houses here. Also, very few automobiles have them - I rarely see one.

The same seems to be true for the other cities here in Oregon. There just are not that many antennas in the cities.

It used to be that just about every other house out in the country had a CB antenna - but now, most of them have disappeared as well.

On the other hand, around here, even the dogs seem to have cell phones.

Are you sure it was radar, and not diathermy or an industrial induction

That I think applies for cell-phones and GPS receivers as well. You have to carry them close to the body other than that you will have trouble with the LCD (GPS), the batteries or with the unit itself, due to the low temperatures (I don't expect to have problems with water, and if there are cheap solutions i.e. waterproof plastic bags).

I don't see the point for the CB if I leave it at the bottom of the mountain. If I have to use it in an emergency I need it just where I am, not in the basecamp or whereever.

That leads to another question regarding the cell phones. I do own a tri-band (GSM 900/1800/1900) cell phone. Therefore the question, do you know about the availability of the GSM 1900 in the Denali region? I know that GSM is not widely used in the US.

that's what you all do .

Again...a very weak attempt to deflect from reality. This is consistant with the overall sense of the keyclowns, that their surreal pathetic your words are.

Oh yeah?
I suppose your support of federal criminality is some sort of a valid lifestyle, ay? George, you are just part of a group fantasy. If you realized that you wouldn't do it. We know that you won't ever, though. That's fine. If you do get caught doing some federal criminality it will be cool to post your info on here from the ARRL web site FCC page. Almost as much fun as it was to read about Flippo.
The funny thing about you is you don't realize, after seeing all the posts about illegal cber's with ham licenses getting popped, that when you get it your buddies here will just write you off as well. How many times has one of them posted "See!!! that was a HAM, not a CB'er!", after a bust was posted? If you don't recognize that then you will just have to read it for yourself, if and when you get popped. For my part, and of the other Anti's...it is just open season against criminals. If we glean a tidbit of data here that helps build a case, good deal. Bear that in mind. We watch, we record, we report.
We do not care if it is just a chip off a huge pyramid of criminal activity. You can say that a million times. You chip enough and the pyramid disappears.

Just a message that will give you a golden opportunity to see how serious we anti-boys are:

We promise you this is about to happen...this is not just a buncha wind...

Within the next few days, possibly not til the end of the month, but definitely within that time, there will be a SIGNIFICANT action taken by a governmental agency against a well known keyclown. This action will exceed that that was whipped on Flippo.

We're not gonna say anymore, but when you see a post by topic "We told you!", take the time to read it. This is just a teaser. You can ridicule it all you want, but watch and see...this isn't a load of BS we are peddlin' here.

We guarantee that this action will make you all, on both sides of the fence, sit up and take notice.

No, Dweebo...totally wrong.
It is a GOOD feeling to know that you have the law onyour side. Only those who have done criminal acts and have either been caught or fear being caught have your attitude. If you were not criminally minded, and were the least bit mature, and were not a drug user, you could comprehend.

True, but what I meant was that handheld CB radios are not very 'ruggedized' for that kind of job. Most cell-phones are built to take quite a bit of abuse, and so are many GPS units. The plastic bag goes without saying.

My point was that they are far from the best choice for emergency communications on a mountain-side. In fact, I would much rather carry a flare gun instead of lugging along such an 'iffy' piece of equipment as a handheld CB radio. I should add that there is no guarantee that someone will be listening to channel 9 all the time. Although the channel is reserved for emergencies, it is not required to be monitored by emergency services.

I know little about cell-phones. Your best bet would be to contact some outfitters and guides in the region (try Yahoo, Google, or Open Directory) and email them with your questions. They would be able to give you specific information that you will need for your climb.

Ha ha ha, you must not have wandered very far from your

the ususal ham weirdos with pot bellies, call signs pasted all over their cars, trucks, hats, filthy shirts, drinking beer and booze and stuffing their fat faces with junk food. All the time bitching about how the "bands" are being ruined by new operators. Seemed the only normal people I saw were the truckers buying marine radios

But you don't. Take the output power and power dissipation ratings for a low-power amp, multiply by 1000, and use the same SWR. The reflected power becomes proportionally larger (x1000), but no more "critical" than the low-power version of the amp.

Maybe you had or were exposed to a defective unit, or maybe someone had their fingers where it shouldn't have been. Not comparing this manufacturer to any other maker, but from what I have witnessed you are dead wrong about the AM, or maybe the one I have been familiar with (hearing on almost a daily basis) for several years (6 pill) is their flagship product that is flawless..I dunno. I have only seen 2 of them up close and I don't know much about them but I do know that this particular one has been in hassle-free use for years and I do know what I hear.
  A yankee friend of mine has one and we talk ALL the time and he is very well known on the air across the country in DX land. After all these years of talking on the air I finally got to put the spoke on him in person and see what he had. Lemme tell ya''...this guy's signal smokes and he ain't no tech!! Just a good 'ol cber like the rest of us. I never was a huge power fan, maybe 'cause I'm spoiled rotten with my terrain (water, water, and more water) and I love long distance DX..but I definitely saw a need in some of the northern areas where more than 4 watts is needed.....and wherever there is a need.....supply and demand will come in to play.

Now here is where the bullshit goes back to it;s origin. I have always maintained you have set YOURSELF forth as N7. To verify, simply do your wonderful google search in rec.radio.cb of the call sign and see whose posts mention it over....and over....and over...and over.......and over...and in each post it will accuse another of referring to you as such. And if you want your conversation with Tim to be kept private, take it to email so as not to embarass yourself further and subject the rest of us to mind boggling nescience.

As far as I understood the Denali park rangers do monitor the channel 9.
That is probably the reason they recommend the CB radio. I do not agree with the flare gun. If there is bad wheather, you won't be able to see the flare.

There is a CB like system in switzerland ~140 MHz where special push buttons on the radio are installed to signalize an emergency. Additionally it's used to communicate between helicopter and rescue teams and victims, but in switzerland in the center of Europe there is a well established infrastructure. If they had not recommended the CB radio I would not have been thinking about taking one with me. If I try to climb a mountain I have to be aware of the risks and take measures to help myself without any rescue teams from outside. Other than that, when relying on the rescue team you could easily get into big trouble anyway.

Wahhhlll, you know when you want sound advice and my input you only ask for me by name...so here it is.....responding to your self-posted number 7....what channel do you ride and what is your handle/numbers?

>Regardless, is there anything, ...ANYTHING you don't, won't or can't understand about my response to Nebo? <

Yea,,,,number 7. I have seen those that claim hammies status and have watched you ask for their calls. You claim you;re a cber, I ask what your rig is, what your antenna is, base/mobile, mic..and all the other good stuff that goes with wonderful cb. Oh yea, and how do those illegal cbers interfere with your work?
And since you're in the mood of answering questions, maybe you can tell me why you and 'Nad had nothing better to do all holiday weekend than to patrol the forum and post 24-7? You musta missed me, judging solely on the amount of times you referenced me, but it will lend no more credibility to your posts, lies, or forges and forged headers than you or Lelnad have now, no matter ow many times you reference me. I am pleased you know who to look to, though. Good training usually yields excellent results by year 2.

Frank had it with:

WHY disregard those?
Just because you may not be able to hear them? Hell, Frank, you don't see the abominable snowman but that doesn't stop YOU from seeking him out..same with ET!

>do you really think there are more than a couple hundred pirate FM stations in the US? <

There are thousands. And if I wanted those pirate stations to have problems, I'd tell you exactly where we hang out. And guess what? Most serious pirates are linked in one way or another...in other words, we can get in touch with each other easier than you can become voobner.

>If you do, is that based on the number of hits from your search?<

It's based on my anti-Clear Channel motivations. There is an entire subculture against commercial radio. You were speaking of kits last week, check the sales from one of those kit makers. Way more than a few hundred are sold. If the kit gives you the bug, then you build from there.
Kits are for newbies, but a great starting point.

>Even better, try and make a list of FM pirate amp and transmitter manufacturers, then compare it to a list of CB amp and "import" manufacturers. Which list do you think is going to be bigger?
        Hell in High school I knew five guys that competed against each other with 'Pirate" fm stations. that was a small town of only 5 thousand people.
We don't even have one pirate station here, I don't think we have ever had one.<

You have at LEAST one there, and she's damn good.

Oh, please. I doubt that any ham that has HF privilages posts or even cares about this newsgroup. The hams on here either talk on the legal 40 or they freeband because they haven't upgraded, otherwise I doubt they'd have any interest in the CB newsgroup since ham radio offers so much more once you've gotten your general ticket. The only use a ham has for CB is channel 19 when they're out on the highway and they need to get traffic reports. This leaves you as either a ham that enjoys the legal 40 (but that's not likely because you are denying using a CB) or more likely, you freeband like many hams without HF privilages.<
Oh please what? Yes I am a ham, Advanced class so I have plenty of HF privileges, and no I don't, never have operated on cb or the so called freeband. And your are correct, amateur radio does offer much more that cb unless you're into operating at illegal power levels using illegally modded radios driving splatter boxes as a lot of cber's are. Many cber's don't want to upgrade to ham radio for the very fact they would be expected to obey the rules.<

Very non-lucid opinion there, "JJ" What could you possibly base it on?
Here's my theory...according to the nasties on the board, there are "fence sitters", IE: Those that haven't made up their own mind about whether to operate legally or illegally and the nasties have to lie and intimidate and attempt to stain decent cbers reputations. Stifling the laughter from the unique perspective that Dogie, Sparky, Hall, and Nad-type behavior will help "fence sitters" decide, one can plainly see that many cbers that may be "fence sitters" want no part of what they see. You see, people aren't as stupid as you like to think, they don't need help in deciding what is right or wrong from people who claim they are hammies but are underground for fear of????? They can plainly read what is in front of them. It appears those who have the most to fear are the loudest in their incorrect ways. Hammies that have helped in the past have never had a problem throwing out their call. But seeing that we're in a cb forum and the call means little more than bodily waste to most, I have come to comprehend why you are so angry.

Tucked away for future perjury proof <g>! Of course I have heard of a general coverage receiver. You oughtta upgrade with the technology that's out there..there is interesting stuff going on far above and below what your Collins can give you.

As long as your needs remain confined, that woud, be fine. Your presence indicates otherwise. Believe me, your Colllins is not considered a "general band receiver" as it lacks many, many areas.

YOU originally said receiver. Now you're talking about TRANSMITTING. Receiving and transmitting are separate and ought be treated as such..

We were talking receive, and yes, my AR can wideband can receive many more "contacts" than your Collins.

Define your version of reliability. You have your own definitions and deliberately skewered applications you apply to words and posts so explain yourself a little better in depth, it appears there is a communication failure on your behalf.

Packrat, We are not a trolls. We are implacably opposed to federal criminality.
Of course, to people like you, that may make us trolls. Whoopie.
Also, it kinda depends on the LD rate and the disposable income.
Apparently that is not considered by people without the means.
Including YOU!

430. OT- AN UP-TO-DATE BILL OF RIGHTS

AN UP-TO-DATE BILL OF RIGHTS

The following has apparently been attributed to State Representative Mitchell Kaye of GA. If true, this guy should have run for President:

"We, the sensible people of the United States, in an attempt to help everyone get along, restore some semblance of justice, avoid any more riots, keep our nation safe, promote positive behavior, and secure the blessings of debt free liberty to ourselves and our great-great-great-grandchildren, hereby try one more time to ordain and establish some common sense guidelines for the terminally whiny, guilt ridden, delusional, and other liberal bed-wetters.

We hold these truths to be self-evident: that a whole lot of people are confused by the Bill of Rights and are so dim that they require a Bill of No Rights".

ARTICLE I: You do not have the right to a new car, big screen TV or any other form of wealth. More power to you if you can legally acquire them, but no one is guaranteeing anything.

ARTICLE II: You do not have the right to never be offended. This country is based on freedom, and that means freedom for everyone -- not just you! You may leave the room, turn the channel, express a different opinion, etc., but the world is full of idiots, and probably always will be.

ARTICLE III: You do not have the right to be free from harm. If you stick a screwdriver in your eye, learn to be more careful, do not expect the tool manufacturer to make you and all your relatives independently wealthy.

ARTICLE IV: You do not have the right to free food and housing. Americans are the most charitable people to be found, and will gladly help anyone in need, but we are quickly growing weary of subsidizing generation after generation of professional couch potatoes who achieve nothing more than the creation of another generation of professional couch potatoes.

ARTICLE V: You do not have the right to free health care. That would be nice, but from the looks of public housing, we're just not interested in public health care.

ARTICLE VI: You do not have the right to physically harm other people. If you kidnap, rape, intentionally maim, or kill someone, don't be surprised if the rest of us want to see you fry in the electric chair.

ARTICLE VII: You do not have the right to the possessions of others. If you rob, cheat or coerce away the goods or services of other citizens, don't be surprised if the rest of us get together and lock you away in a place where you still won't have the right to a big screen color TV or a life of leisure.

ARTICLE VIII: You don't have the right to demand that our children risk their lives in foreign wars to soothe your aching conscience. We hate oppressive governments and won't lift a finger to stop you from going to fight if you'd like. However, we do not enjoy parenting the entire world and do not want to spend so much of our time battling each and every little tyrant with a military uniform and a funny hat.

ARTICLE IX: You don't have the right to a job. All of us sure want you to have a job, and will gladly help you along in hard times, but we expect you to take advantage of the opportunities of education and vocational training laid before you to make yourself useful.

ARTICLE X: You do not have the right to happiness. Being an American means that you have the right to PURSUE happiness --which by the way, is a lot easier if you are unencumbered by an overabundance of idiotic laws created by those of you who were confused by the Bill of Rights,"

Dave, you are as ignorant as your are illiterate. We are not against CB radio at all. As long as it is kept between 26.965 and 27.405, and done with legal output power. If it is not operated in this fashion, that makes the operator a federal criminal.

No I wasn't the one involved, in fact it was a joke a frienbd sent to me, but it was just too funny not to share. I wonder how many othetrs besides myself have always dreamed of doing such a thing.

I will relate an actual event though, this is in memory of Deputy Fred Reinbolt, who was a friend of mine and had recently passed away.

One night Fred stopped at the local coffee shop for his break and we were all in there raising hell and harassing the waitress when Fred got a call on his radio to respond to an accident, needless to say he left in a hurry and left his smokes at the coffee shop. A hour or so later he calles the shop on his cell phone and asked if his smokes were there, and when the waitress said yes he said he'd be by in about 30 minutes to get them. In the meantime, we took some of Freds smokes and put cigg loads in them. Flash forward to about 5 am, when Fred was patrolling along OH 424 along the Maumee River, hit lights a smoke, takes a drag or two and the smoke explodes, he runs into the ditch and freaks out because he thought someone w3as shooting at him. If that wasn't bad enough, when his shift ended at 7 am he went home and dropped his pack on the counter, his wife shakes a smoke loose and lights it and it explodes on her, and she starts beating the hell out of Fred because she thought he did it to get her.

Fred was a cool cop, we need more like him, the day they buried him they buried a real officer of the law.

Um...

If the impedance is being transformed by the coax, then the swr reading at the meter will change. However, the SWR of the system does not change. The best place to measure SWR is at the antenna feedpoint. Set it from there, and the length of the coax means diddly.

What radios / antennas are you using for your boat / cottage? We have the same situation w/FRS vs. CB. We are quite remote here and CB works great over the water, but I need input on antennas especially. Thanks.

if the person has knowingly and willingly refused to make the check good after we have contacted that person then the matter is usually forgotten if its written for anything less than 200 bucks simply because it would cost more of our time and money to go to the police and follow up with court procedures such as being a witness and all of that then it would be to just add there name to the list of customers whos service is now refused and write it off as a bad experience. what we do not do is get excited and over joyed each time were given a hot check just because we get to turn somebody into the police as you suggest. that would still make us some really big losers who just enjoy snitching on people and thats totally lame. guess thats why you enjoy it so much since your the lamest person i know of.

Hrm.. Really?

What do you call "bleedover"? That's interference from the mistuned "big" radios out there...

If people would stop looking at their RF power meter outputs and look at spectrum analyzers instead, they'd notice that they're putting out alot of watts on frequencies they're not intentionally transmitting on... That's interference.

4 watts on one channel is alot "louder" than 8 watts on 40 channels.

I never said it was a general coverage receive, it was ham band only when manufactured, now it is ham band only plus 11 meters. I ask if you had ever heard of a general coverage receiver because you seemed to imply that anyone who did not have cb equipment could not possibly know what goes on on the cb band.

I said my "The Collins equipment (notice I said equipment, not receiver) gives me everything I need". That would include the S-Line and the KWM-2. Just to fill you in, the S-Line consists of a 32S-1 TRANSMITTER and 75S-1 RECEIVER, the KWM-2 is a TRANSCEIVER. So what more do I need?

I think on the same day, if I'm not mistaken, I listened to a conversation involving Jerry and another hammie using a lot of foul language on the same band------should it be my right as a 30 year General Class to turn him in?? I'm still pondering the thought.

Don't bring one in. Purchase one locally before climbing.
Perhaps get a recommendation from the park rangers and see what else they may want you to have.
You'll find them fairly inexpensive at local shops.
We also have what is called "Family Radio Service" which is in the UHF range.
They may have a repeater set up for that as well.

By the way, no license required.

George Bush senior was a big Hitler supporter too (that would be george bush part 1's father) - a senator and a conservative republican. Another thing about the Nazi party - they were a far right conservative movement - one of the first groups they went after were the communists. I think you of all people would appreciate them since they went after the people you loath.

Like you said,

"Sam Cooke was right! Don't know 'nuthin about history! We will be doomed to repeat it!"

Well I do know something about history - I graduated with a degree in the subject from Portland State University - specifically US history. And in all the books I've read I've never heard of the "vipers". To me the great depression was a result of high tarrifs passed here and abroad, market speculation and climbing consumer debt (hmm - kinda like we have now...).

http://www.dol.gov/opa/aboutdol/laborday.htm - here you go the history of labor day. Was started by Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners and a cofounder of the American Federation of Labor (known today as the AFL-CIO). While the AFL has its roots in socialist radicalism - one could easily argue that then as today that kind of attittude was needed to help American workers get decent hours, honest wages and fair and safe work environment.

Maybe you don't like the Department of Labor's version. Here's another one,

http://www.pbs.org/newshour/bb/business/september96/labor_day_9-2.html

Labor day has nothing to do with communism - it has everything to do with recognizing that workers in America are what made this country great and they deserve our respect as much as anyone.

477. The Garage CB Radio (An old post by Jay in the Mojave)

Newsgroup: rec.radio.cb

Message-ID: <6a4c1ec2.0209031300.5527dbcd@posting.google.com>

The Garage CB Radio.

The garage CB radio was never ment to be as good as the CB Radio in the house. The garage CB radio was always a kind of second radio installed in the garage to allow you to listen in on all the local CB goings on. This allowed you to show up at the local coffee shop in your overalls, with a distinctive scent of carburetor cleaner. Then you could socialize and maintain your standing of the inner CB group.

The antenna for the house CB radio was always mounted on a 60 Ft. tower with best of coax and installation practices, always. The garage CB radio antenna used what ever you could find for a few bucks, anything over ten bucks could not be considered as a Garage CB radio antenna system. Usually a old Droopy Draws quarter wave length antenna (9 Ft. tall), sold by Radio Shack for $9.95 new, was used as a antenna. Or a old TV antenna just laying up on the roof. Each Garage antenna had to be a unique, one of kind installation. This was a expression of the individual. Old cars in the backyard with a 102" inch whip antenna would be considered a Garage antenna. It received ok, just allowing the reception of the local CB traffic. Again not designed or installed for transmitting. Just copying the mail, while one worked on ones projects, rebuilding the ol carb while looking for those damn springs and ball barring that explode out everywhere, sawing up boards, emptying beer cans, working on a linear, welding stuff, drilling things, you know, ... working in the garage.

Usually to impress other local CB'ers, the garage CB Radio had to have something wrong with it, to give the impression that you were a guy who make broke things work. A wire dangling lose, and unconnected gave this impression. Or a bad filter capacitor in the power supply that gave the transmit audio a distinctive hum, that had another much worse looking capacitor connected in by clip leads, that sometimes shorts out (making the use of the Garage CB Radio, paralleled taking your life in your hands at times) gives the Garage radio it's mesquite. You keep a can of Lacquer open to give off that Garage smell, when friends drop over to costume mass quantities of beer and stale, ant infested patio chips.

So the accepted and expected Garage CB radio anomalies of notoriety where: weak modulation, being off frequency, a load squeal or hum in your transmit audio, terrible tone quality, back ground noises of air compressors, florescent lights flickering, power tools of all kinds. Having the Garage CB Radio on top of the old Norge Refrigerator that kept all the beer cool, was a FCC Rule, I think.

A old tube radio running off a even older car 12 volt lead acid battery being charged by a battery charger, with a 20 Ft. piece of wire stuck in the antenna connector fit the bill, if the mic wasn't to nice..... A old radio setting there as the receiver, on top of another radio that was the transmitter, was of course acceptable..... Or a nice one piece CB radio with a car antenna being used as the antenna that's nailed to a board, with the coax just pushed into the antenna connector was always a winner.... Of course a home-brew Heathkit (We all called Griefkit) sitting next to the drill press, with metal shavings all over it, was always a favorite.

Just as the light switch turns on the florescent lights, it turns on the CB Radio to, so that after the florescent light show is over with, the tubes in the CB radio light off, allowing the local home channel, to be in ears reach.

Garage CB Radio's sometimes had extra long mic cords that allowed over the air, auto mechanics engine trouble shooting and analysis. The entourage of CB Radio auto mechanics, with their own unique and different diagnosis, was never short of experts. Old Bert would make comments while chewing a cigar in one side of his mouth. Old Man Bert was always hard to understand, but my Dad always laughed when he talked over the CB. I never understood why Bert was considered amazing. Maybe it was the German accent. Once we heard the sharp crisp sound of a mic bouncing off a rotating fan blade, during the engine valve train hour.

I remember quite a few Garage CB Radio QSO's that had to take up the main home channel during the mobile hour that required several 10-5's (Or relays, from other stations) this was a acceptable practice. After all the guy was using his Garage Radio.

Some CB radio type things ain't understood by all. It's best to attend the coffee breaks so that one can understand the proper CB Radio protocols and procedures, and who's all behind it. Something's in life aren't book learned.

Jay at jay123a@ptw.com .... In the Great Mojave Desert, just down the road ah ways from the fillin station.

OH!? How do you account for the different addresses? It IS, after all, a form letter sent as an initial warning. And, without being too "specific", let's just say I knew this one was coming. You go right "ahaid" and "take an ole stood by thar on that thar freeband thar, mercy me thar, shore thang thar, gre't day thar". Those warnings to 10 and 12 meter bandits are REAL, bud. Just ask ole "Rabbit Ears" down in Fla. about the chains and leg irons, about the 15 month jail sentence, the $25,000 fine. Ask him if those iron bars are real, or if those tears he cried in court were real. He who laughs LAST laughs BEST!

Silly! The ILLEGAL station IS the interference because he has NO authority to be there in the first place. You have no legal leg to stand on. IF you, for example, are talking on 28.085 and I come on right on top of you with hi speed code, the station that would be cited is yours simply because you have NO operating authority. Therefore illegal stations have NO protection from so-called "interference" from a legal station. To settle the question, just email rholling@fcc.gov for the correct answer. It WILL be what I just told you! Oh, BTW, since the truckers are operating on AM in a portion of spectrum set aside for non-voice modes by ITU regulations/agreement, they are likely to face more than one count---if FCC wants to push it.

Hi All!
Getting set to put in my first CB since I was 16! (I am forty now!)

Ok...in the old days...the headliner of a car or truck was a piece of cerdboard like stuff that you took down (had huge hollow!) then you ran the track between the windshield...and whala!...the coax was under the dash!

Now I have a 1997 Dodge Full Size pickup. It's headliner seems like it is a solid piece of foam (under the material)...that is tight to the steel roof! The only place I see screws are where my passenger "Hold On" is...and by my overhead light!

I was thinking of installing a Wilson 1000 roof-mount. Can I do this without destroying the truck!!!!!!!
My other option ia a magnetic mount, with the coax going thru my sliding rear window. (I have a System One Cage, so theft thru open window, will not be a problem.) I figure I'll seal the window space where the coax goes ito truck with something...to keep noise...and water out.

Ideas and suggestions please! Thank You

Marty

You are a Nothing, Aanal Aaron. You and Georgie-girl are frustrated and desperate ehough to believe anything because you can't ID me.

I agree with others, though; Aanal Aaron and Frankie do seem to be joined at the hip and the lip.

Georgie-girl has a real identity problem: He claims to be an Advanced, yet QRZ lists him as an Extra. Maybe they mean "Extra stupid"? He sure is one hell of an "elmer"; if I had read this newsgroup before I got my ham license, I wouldn't have bothered to take the test. Why would I want to talk to jack@$$e$ like him? He has no clue what the spirit of amateur radio might be. He thinks it comes in a bottle!

Section 1: What Is A Troll?
The WWW gives this as a definition:

troll v.,n. To utter a posting on Usenet designed to attract predictable responses or flames. Derives from the phrase "trolling for newbies"; which in turn comes from mainstream "trolling";, a style of fishing in which one trails bait through a likely spot hoping for a bite. The well-constructed troll is a post that induces lots of newbies and flamers to make themselves look even more clueless than they already do, while subtly conveying to the more savvy and experienced that it is in fact a deliberate troll. If you don't fall for the joke, you get to be in on it.
The following extract is from a broader expansion of the defining comments given above:

In Usenet usage, a "troll" is not a grumpy monster that lives beneath a bridge accosting passers-by, but rather a provocative posting to a newsgroup intended to produce a large volume of frivolous responses. The content of a "troll" posting generally falls into several areas. It may consist of an apparently foolish contradiction of common knowledge, a deliberately offensive insult to the readers of a newsgroup, or a broad request for trivial follow-up postings.
There are three reasons why people troll newsgroups:

People post such messages to get attention, to disrupt newsgroups, and simply to make trouble.
Career trollers tend for the latter two whilst the former is the mark of the clueless newbie and should be ignored.

I would like to make exception to the long distant calls remark....
what a lot of people dont realize is that a very short termination to ground (at the antenna)on magnet mount like the 1000 will greatly improve the effectivness.Also will reduce any ignition/computer noise by at least 75%

Dave!!!!! needs to go on the Springer show. He would fit right in with the trailer park trash guy who was pimping his girl friend's daughter at the steel mill without the knowledge of the daughter's husband. The guy claimed to be the 'brains of the outfit' and I have no doubt of it. "Where else can you make a hundred bucks in an hour?" If that didn't get it, the Christian minister in eastern Tennessee, Dave's !!!! home, who was banging the daughters of the church deacons and claiming that he was wiping their sins away. Where does Springer find the trash?

It just gets complicated. Freedom of religion - so, if you get some fanatical sect that believe in beating kids, it is very difficult to bring charges ... and others start getting a little bit upset over it (and, in my opinion, rightly so). So it is with freedom of speach. Does that give you the right to scream 'FIRE!' in a crowded theatre? And, what about slander? Of course, it would be nice if there was a nice clean line in the sand where everyone is happy if we all stay on one side of it and no one wants to cross that line - but the stupid winds keep shifting that line. Where do ya draw it? Do you draw the line at saying that 'F' word? What about live intercourse over the tv network? Some folks with kids might get a bit upset over that. Some folks even without kids might get a bit upset over that. Which brings us back to square one - where do you draw the line? The states even differ over this. In Florida, you'd best not get caught looking at the wrong websites. In Texas, - oh, forget Texas, I heard they just executed the last citizen.

Stop. This thread is going in too many directions.

1. Does a 1:5:1 match make a difference to a 1:1:1?

You bet it does. we are talking about a circuit impedence of 75 ohms a opposed to 50 ohms. The more AC introduced, the more feed back and harmonics you will get.(Reflected power, RF feedback, etc...) I run alot of QRP, and every little bit helps.

One thing I will agree with. How efficient of a radiator the antenna, is more important than the SWR over all. Problem is most shortened CB antenna are not very efficient radiators

2. What causes mismatches in antenna systems on cars the most, Counterpoise/Ground.

A vertical is nothing more than a Dipole turned side ways. You antenna becomes the positive, you car body becomes the counterpoise. Having a poorly grounded car will effect not only your SWR, but your reception as well.

Solutions

1. Run an insulated wire around the edges on the truck bed, or under the frame and attach it to your antenna mount.
2. Another thing you can do is bond the doors of your Vehicle. Doing that will not only make a better ground, but it will lower the resonant frequency of your vehicle which will reduce engine noise.
3. Run a wire from the ground/shieled part of your antenna mount directly to the frame.

3. Top loaded antennas do not resonate at the top, but at the bottom.(Firestik, wilson, etc....)

The part of the antenna that is really doing all of the work is the loosely coiled wire at the bottom. The wire coiled at the top is just there to pass inductive reactance to the circuit to tune the antenna. Very little resonating is done in the coil at all. The key to getting the maximum out put from this antenna is to get as much of this antenna in the air and away from the car body as possible. Also, the longer top load antenna you get, the better it will work. Also keep in mind that a top loaded antenna is going to be more narrow banded.

4. The 108 in whip is the one to get....yes it is. If your connections are right, you will get the most band width out of this antenna, and the best overall effective radiation. Why? No coils.

I wont turn this into a math discussion. I do a lot of low power operations, and things like the SWR, choice of antenna, and where it's located make all of the difference in the world.

Dave,

FYI, Twistedhed has a difficult time with identities. He has accused many people of being who they are not, and with some of them he has done so more than once. He even forges posts under the names of other people. Some readers have him killfiled, some just ignore him, while a few of us enjoy reading his delusional rants. Of course there are a couple dimwits that take his words for gospel, which is good if you like reading newsgroup posts for their amusement value.

Well, no. It's obvious. I never thought of phrasing it that way. I just thought it was funny. Usually when I hear a severely overmodulated splatterbox, I kindly remind the guy that he would sound better and get out a little better if he wasn't so darn overmodulated. I usually get an expected reply like "So what?". At least now I have a funny way to get my point across. Some other guy listening will go "Hey, that's funny". And it is. I'm glad I read it.

It can under many circumstances. Like if an output filter or a balun uses a toroid and the reflected power sends the core into saturation.
Or if the output device is a bipolar and the additional heat from the reflected power increases the collector current until it clips the power supply. There are a few other possiblities, but I won't go into them.

When your done reading that let me tell you how Ford, GM, Volkswagon and other used slave labor in Germany during the 1930's/40's to make American executives wealthy.

Uhhh, Twistedhed, I think you mixed me up with some one else. I see you quoted my post but referred to me as Dave Hall and made a few comments that I don't think can be applied to me. This was just a case of mistaken identity right? I'm sure if you look up any posts by me you'll see I keep it fairly low key.

FYI, Twistedhed has a difficult time with identities. He has accused many people of being who they are not, and with some of them he has done so more than once. He even forges posts under the names of other people.

The only "problem" appears to be that of you, Lelnad, and Dogie and Dave Hall being so similar in your language, insults, innuendo. Hell, one of you is no different than the other.
Mention indentities and Frank's palms are already sticky.
Regarding false accusations you are so well known for, webtv has one of the toughest AUP and TOS' in the business.
Forging is automatically grounds for termination.
My account has been the same, and has with held all your bullshit lies

I am still here under the same name I've posted under for years.
Go back and deal with your tragedy.

I seen something interesting in an outdoor calalog the other day. A "base" radio touted as "increasing" your range for MRS AND FRS...it was a dual radio that looked more like a cordless telephone base set than a radio. says radius up to "5" miles......wonder how these 'lil things are selling........price was less than a hundred, I think.

Haven't seen it. MURS, yes; it certainly is possible for a 5 mile range. FRS, not legally. The limitations with a fixed toy duckie and very low power would make 5 miles unlikely. Of course, there are stories of high power cordless phones being imported - and siezed. Really, one needs to consider what ones communications needs (and wants) are and then make a choice as to what to use. FRS offers a decent range without interference from skip. If skip is in your blood, then 27 MHz is the place to be. FRS is really good, perhaps, for taking the kids to the amusement park and staying in touch. Not a whole lot more (although it can be useful for staying in touch between two vehicles headed to the same place).

Mad Dog,
First, it isn't inductive coupling, it's capacitive coupling. The magnet acts as one plate of a capacitor, the metal of the vehicle's body acts as the other plate. If you select the right capacitance, at RF a capacitor acts as a 'short', making a connection to ground. It's not rare at all.

Hello to all the Newsgroup Readers...

This is Chuck K8CPA....

I have been monitoring all the posts between Doug N8WWM and the person acting as if he were me.

I got an interesting visitor this morning. A Detective from the Lincoln Park Police Dept, came to my Door and was wanting to know what was going on in this newsgroup.

Well, I ended up going down to the station and after we discussed the situation, A Detective Chuck from Findlay, Ohio called and I explained to him what was going on... I wasn't arrested or anything... I went on my own...

Guys... Look, The days of getting in here and being stupid are gone for good. Doug, I would advise you to stop calling the police and giving them my name. BTW, I did give the local detective here and the detective in Findlay, Ohio your name and address and told them you were the one who called the Findlay, Ohio Police. I also will tell you, that the Findlay, Ohio Police Detectives are going to contact the Toledo Police and let them know of your actions.

Guys, Seriously, After 9-11-01, We can't be getting in here and making threats, this goes for EVERYBODY, Including ME! I saw the post reguarding the 9MM Gun, I didn't write it... I noticed it came from a Comcast subscriber. and I will ask in public, PLEASE, Stop posting this sort of stuff... and especially posting my Amateur Radio callsign in the same message..

and I will write this as well, I have never, and will more than likely never own a Gun, I do not like them, nor do I like being around them, If this gets the jollys of the "Anti-Keyclowns", I'm happy for them, But I'm not risking getting into any kind of Legal trouble, because some meat-headed fool, is going to post a message with MY callsign in it, talking about some sort of Firearm.

I will be at the Findlay Hamfest. I will have a table. I will be in the company of K8VA.. We will be selling what's left of W8GUR's Estate.

I look forwarding to meeting anyone who wants to introduce themselves to me.

best of 73 and this will be last posting in this newsgroup for a while... I don't need the trouble... sorry

Signed,

-Chuck K8CPA

this week the Fulton County Ohio fair is going on, and the Fulton County Club has 2 stations operating, with the purpose of getting new people interested in amateur radio, operators will be on 80m, 40m, and 20m, and possibly on 17m. If you hear the call K8BXQ this is the station, we look forward to talking with you, and putting on a good demonstration to the public.

If you are running enough power for the reflected power to saturate the core in a balun, the what do you think the forward power is doing? SWR is not the generator of harmonics.

I am learning code, and do plan to upgrade, and as to why, you know as well as I do that there are many hams who read and post here. And if you think Okay, I got the message about the cheap radio, it was so cheap I got it free. Here's the weird thing though. If I have it hooked to my 102" whip on my pickup, mounted through the fender, I don't have the problem. Only when I have the radio mounted in my Suburban with the lil Wil antenna. Could be the antenna.

And by the way Dave or Debby, in the future, save yourself the aggravation and don't respond to my posts. I don't need your useless, self important prattle. To everyone else who responded kindly, thank you very much. Your insight is much appreciated. And Dave or Debbie, decide on who the hell you are unless you are the shemale you seem.

Why would a local cop be so interested in words being exchanged in a damned newsgroups of all places?
He should be more concerned with what's shown on television.

I don't think that Labor Day so much has its roots in communism as it has its roots in the greedy labor unions that are nothing more than a group labor bosses that feed off of the greed of the common worker. Why do you think that they are always wanting to increase wages and benefits? The more the average Joe laborer makes the more he pays in union dues. This is all they want. Work less, make more, pay more dues. That's where Labor Day came from. It had nothing to do with communism, just greedy labor unions.

Hi Jamey, My name is Woody Parr and I'm up the road in Cornelia. I'm afraid that I'm indirectly responsible for this troll who is badmouthing you at alt.religion.urantiabook. You see he was only there in the first place to attack me.

This idiot is Steven J. Rogovich, 1612 Lake Christopher dr. Virginia Beach, Va. 23464 He followed me to the UB usenet page from alt.radio.pirate He and I (were) both formerly loosely associated with each other in the shortwave pirate radio listening hobby. I USED to be a shortwave pirate but my station has been permanently retired for more than 2 years now. Stevie is still a pirate and is the operator of the station Radio Free Speech. He is also the moderator of a message board at the Free Radio Network < www.frn.net > and goes by the handle of Pat Murphy there. I had a falling out with the people at the FRN a couple of years ago as they became corrupt and were doing so inappropriate things. I dared to open my mouth and openly complain about there stupid activities which since they havn't yet ceased to follow me around the internet anywhere they can and attack me.

Steve is also on the usenet trolling people under the name of Richard Cranium (richardcranus@yahoo.com) He's far too much of a coward to debate anyone using his real name.

710. Re: The Garage CB Radio (An old post by Jay in the Mojave)

Boy do I remember those days!! We were pretty high tech, He-20c, d-104 with a Vibratrol and an HA250 on a battery/trickle charger through the GOOD Lafayette ground plane, (the $9.95 one with FOUR ground radials, baayyybeee!) which went to the garage after the HB400 and the Gene Vetter two tuber replaced it in the house. Anybody remember old Gene (AMP) from Jay St. in Rochester? Rig sat on the top shelf in the old mans tool cabinet, the one with the naughty calender from Veterans Auto parts inside the door. The first garage rig was an RCA Mark 9, that was a loud old bastard with a Plus 2 using a D104 element taped over the front of it! The Laffingyet had better ears and louder audio output which was required in order to hear important calls over the rumbling of the Buick 4 holer that was always a work in progress!
There have been a few time spans over the years when CB was a lot of fun, like these old days, and when SSB was in it's heyday with all of the early clubs and freeband just starting, really civil operating practices and no beeps and echo, amps usually just idled alongside the rig unless there was a point to be made or a distant contact was there. Even if you had a Yaesu or Tempo or 1011D, you still said it was a Lafayette or a Courier, cause y'never know. Yeah, I know it was bootlegging, so no flames are required. A lot of the old bootleggers are Extra class now, although they'll seldom admit it. Now it seems, at least around here, that even the Old Timers call freq. is quiet, and all of the old ragchew freq's are gone, the AM standby's are filled with kids and clobberheads (remember THAT term?) pretending they are Howard Stern. Out here in the sticks, in some of the small towns there are still a few fleeting sounds of a gang of folks shooting the breeze at night, talking about their kids or jobs or whatever, and if you are up late enough (or early enough) you can hear the guys delivering the rural morning newspaper routes keeping each other company. Christ, I just realized I have become a cranky old man...I'm heading for the garage, the Buick is idling kinda rough....

Clyde has the same problem with identities that Twisty does: Pick any name in the newsgroup and arbitrarily assign it to someone else. That method seems to work well for Twisty, and you can't argue with success...

You sure do lie a lot, Chukkee. Your Comcast account was the source of those threats. Don't lie, it was proven.

If you do not own a gun why were you making posts about having a .45 in your car, and your lie about having a CCW permit, and "polishing up the 9MM"? My oh my how your tune changes after you get caught out.

Chukkee, You fool no one except yourself.

Been using a TS 500HDV for a little while now, and i need something a little better. any pros and cons would be good, plus if anybody knows the actual output of the amps, seeing as i have found different ratings on several different sites. Drug problem? That was almost eight years ago. You know the funny part though George? My "drug addled mind" is far more cognitive than yours has ever been or has any hope of ever being. That's what's funny. You have no hope of ever being any competition for me. You are mentally handicapped. That's a given, and there's nothing you can do to change that fact. Go cry to Doug again. Maybe he'll coach you through this also, but it's doubtful that you can follow his instructions without messing that up, too. Later, Boy-George.

Ferrite beads.
They have a variety of styles that get clamped down over the end of the cable near the radio.
If you look at your computer cable, you'll see a nice big "bump" on the line.
That's a ferrite bead. Do a search on the web and you'll find plenty of sources for all kinds of applications.

You all know what an extreme liar Chukkee is.
The facts of the matter are simple. Chukkee is falling over himself backing up because he KNOWS he was caught dead to rights. He can lie all he wants, but the truth won't change because of it.

As far as that particular kind of posting goes...If you think someone should be allowed to post gun threats to the NG, yer nuts.

People here call each other everything in the book everyday, without gun threats. Now here comes little Chukkee whining that it was someone else posting as him that did this. He know it is a lie, and he thinks that telling it will save his bacon. Wrong.

Actually it does sound familiar. He said the same thing in 2000 when he threatend to "shoot yer dawg, rape yer wife, and fuck yer daughter". Aftwerward he again said it was sommeone else. Yup...shurrrrrrre. Mighty strange that Chukkee, not the "someone else", got his AT&T account yanked. Yup...shurrrrre.

Chukkee, maybe you should get the Iron Coffins or the Latin Counts to go after that "someone else". He sure is giving you a baaaaad reputation. <snicker> While yer at it you could have "someone else" brought to you and you could take your 9MM, which you have a CCW permit for, and threaten that "someone else" guy into not posting anymore. <guffaw> I bet the "pigs"<chukkees word, not mine> would letya slide on that one. We all know from your posts here how much law enforcement fears "fucking with" you. I bet, in their abject fear, they will even give you a free pass on the latest gun threat, seeing how "someone else" did it AGAIN, and pooor 'lil chukkee is a victim of some false accusation.

I second that. What are you trying to accomplish?

All four amps have similar output and noone not looking at your wattmeter will be able to tell. Stay with the clean and reliable Texas Star.

Proper AM requires 4 times the power for modulation as compared to the dead key (carrier). For a 500 watt peak amp, the carrier should be 125 watts. Class C amps (X-Force without bias) do not conduct for the entire cycle of the wave and cause mucho splatter, RFI and distortion. Limiters (clippers) should be left intact also.

My garage radio is an old TRC 30A, 23 channel rig, with a "marine" 102" whip. The radio occasionally squeals when transmitting, so I guess that qualifies as a bona-fide garage setup......

Now if I could only find some people worthy of talking to........

Scott, if you have never been on irc then I can understand your lack of knowledge.

The only higer position on IRC than an IRCop is a server admin and the Admins only vote on server policies, code updates, abd appoint IRCops who actually do all the work.

I've been on IRC for 10 years, I have been server admin on 2 different networks, cservice admin on 2 networks, abuse admin on 2 networks.

Some of my early base setups were no better than the garage radio.
It's funny how some of my most memorable and fun experiences with CB radio, happened while I ran some really junk stuff.

Exactly! And this point seems lost on the current generation of "more is always better" operators.

> Even if you had a Yaesu or Tempo or 1011D, you still said it was a Lafayette or > a Courier, cause y'never know.

There was a real fear of the FCC back then. People always downplayed their setups, rather than bragged about them, so as not to attract attention. Of course, it was hard to disguise a Tempo 1 or a 1011* on AM as anything other than what they really were, because they sounded so ratty. You had to switch to the standby AM rig and leave those "premium" radios on SSB.

> Yeah, I know it was bootlegging, so no flames are required.

It was part of the fun. Back during a time when mostly the techincal wizards could play in the sandbox. And it was kept on a low key.

Maybe not on the ham bands, but most of us like to swap "war stories" with other people who experienced similar things on CB in the glory days.

Yea, it's like that here too. Channel 19 is the only channel with any regular activity. There's one local group that seems to pride itself in the amount of distortion they can get out of a CB radio. If it's not class C amps, it's echos and beeps. The skip cycle pretty much decimated that group, and there are only a few distant QSO's on the rest of the band, most of whome seem to be mobile.

There is one channel where I hear some old timers chewing the breeze, and it made me realize that I'm in limbo. I'm too old to be chasing Britney Spears wannabees and too young to be discussing aches, pains, and retirement. Most of the people I hear now are either under 30 or over 60.

Sometimes it's enevitable. We become our parents. At least those of us who are wise enough to learn and mature. Crankiness is only our frustration showing itself when we can't impart our wisdom on those much younger, as our fathers did with us, when we were young

Haven't seen it. MURS, yes; it certainly is possible for a 5 mile range. FRS, not legally. The limitations with a fixed toy duckie and very low power would make 5 miles unlikely. Of course, there are stories of high power cordless phones being imported - and siezed. Really, one needs to consider what ones communications needs (and wants) are and then make a choice as to what to use. FRS offers a decent range without interference from skip. If skip is in your blood, then 27 MHz is the place to be. FRS is really good, perhaps, for taking the kids to the amusement park and staying in touch. Not a whole lot more (although it can be useful for staying in touch between two vehicles headed to the same place). 73 from Rochester, NY

We used the FRS radios in the mountains and in our traveling caravan as well, as there were several vehicles in our one leg of the trip.
  Always had a few FRS at "base" camp (no pun intended) and one of the couples we were with had kids and used them to keep in touch throughout the campground. The range varied...from almost anywhere out on the lake we could reach the camp, but as we neared shore, even though it was closer to camp, the signal began breaking up and we were receiving only parts of what was being said. Of course, from the shoreline, camp was almost straight up vertically and over a slight hill. A handheld cb probably would have served us better in this predicament, but I hate those damn things.
What's surprising is the number of OTHERS that had FRS radios at some of the campgrounds we stayed at......tone encodements included. Lotsa kids were funnin' around with 'em and a few drunk adults as well, I suspect.
The catalog I was thinking of was the Sportsman's Guide and the radio was dual FRS/GMRS, not MURS.
You can still check it out...go to sportmansguide.com and go to the search function on the left and enter "GMRS".
The base unit will show for around 89 bucks.

I had a radio once that was no good like that. Tech said it was the connector where the mike plugged into but he couldn't do a thing about it because of the type of connector.
So being a cheap radio to begin with, I just replaced it.
Could be anything internally. Vibrations have been known to knock solder joints loose.
Bad diode, transistor blown, shot capacitor, bad chip and so on.
You might also try a different coax.
Sometimes a simple short causes rigs not to transmit, but reception is just fine.

our wisdom on those much younger,

I maintained that of you for such a long time. Frustration has always been part of your posts if you can't get one to see it your way, or agreee that your days of "war stories" are better than the present. Wisdom is asked for and seeked. Insulting and attempting to jam your ideas down one's throat, and becoming increasingly hostile to the point where your posts are no longer about the subject topic but are personal in nature about the poster is not "wisdom", but it does validates your animosity.

Some of us are still young enough to enjoy radio and old enough to know better than to let something prejudicial, such as pre-conceived notions about age or radio service dictate our behavior.

Why does my success upset you so much?
Maybe because you never experienced it, thus you have to redundantly remind yourself and others of what mundane accomplishments you have managed, no mattre how trivial or meaningless.
Just because you have tried in vain for personal info on others and failed miserably doesn't take away from anyone else. Why, you have

We only see this type anger from you or the Lelnad man KC8LDO when y'all

Sorta like what all these self-descibed snitches are professing under the false guise of promoting legalities among radio while simultaneously disregarding not only terms of service agreements but newsgroup etiquette and rules. It appears they choose to obey only rules that they agree with, which makes the lot hypocritical at best, ignorant (unaware) at the least.
It isn't the cussing that is so politically incorrect so much as it denotes an ignorance about a person when they use it for insult. It illustrates that person has no grasp for proper word usage and is easily frustrated. That frustration manifests in insults toward others filled with not merely "cuss" words, but filth and perversion, innuendos, and personal remarks.
As far as "hating" anything, it is easy to see where the "hate" emanates from on this board, and it isn't coming from cb loving folk.

Ummm ... you listed the secondary ratings. If someone has the tubes but doesn't even know their filament ratings ... uhhhh.... am I missing something? Not to mention that this was cross-posted to more groups than I care to count. Now that I think of it, you mentioned what tubes those transformers could be used for. If someone didn't understand which tube(s) were appropriate for a given voltage and current rating, care to bet where he'd hook the secondary to? Control grid?

Heheheh...

Fat lying weenie boy makes a fat lying weenie boy attempt to defocus from the fact that he is too stupid to realize that that was just the opening. You aint off the hook with city hall yet, sonny boy.

Yeah, ChukkeeSukkee, you know about stale acts, I'll give you that. The gun act and the gang affiliation act are both stale. Not to mention a pack of lies. Also, that whole thing about the CCW permit, and how "pigs" knew better than to mess with you.

The bottom line is you are completely incapable of social contact with people who disagree with you without resorting to threats.

How does it feel to be a fat punk who can do nothing but make threats against women and kids over the internet? How does it feel to havesuch a crummy, pathetic life that you have to tell lies to make yourself feel good? Stupid lies at that! Gangs, guns...CCW permits...working for Roush... How does it feel to live with mommy? How does it feel to be an utter failure at every job you have ever been hired at? <YUP! WE CHECKED YOU OUT!>

The antiboys will be on your sociopathic ass from now on. Come on, sonny...post another threat. That will be great to show the judge when you see him over this last one. Bark all you want, but that is happening. Moron.

Then it sounds like your transmit DC source inside the radio is not working.
You need to locate the voltage regulator chip and verify...

Why would he do that? If -you- were chasing him, all he has to do to stop you is to toss a baggie into the bushes. By the time you fish the bag out of the bushes and find out it contains nothing that can be popped, smoked, snorted or shot-up, the cops should be there.

Nobody was ever afraid of me because I wasn't a bully, I was a friend (and somewhat of a nerd). There were a couple morons that would pick on me (just like anybody else), but after a couple fights in grade-school I learned that it's more fun (and much easier) to ignore the twit and laugh at him behind his back. But even though I got picked on a bit, that didn't encourage me to pick on anyone else.

>you'd be suprised what you learn in school growing up in very high crime area >like this. we have kids 12 years old with more street smarts than the majortity >of all college grads.

My high-school, John R. Rogers, was considered the toughest in town. I am 99% sure that you have even seen it -- it was the high-school in that pathetic excuse for a movie, "Vision-Quest". Interesting story there: Ken Pelo, who played the wrestling coach for the 'other' team in the movie, was really the wrestling coach for Rogers HS, which was one of the best teams in the state. He was also the Social Studies teacher.

But "street smarts" is a good thing to have if that's where you are going to be living.

>nah frank i never had that problem. i wasnt a nerd like you. its obvious you >was because you still hold a resentment to all the "cool" people, even the ones >here on this group.

You mean "cool" people like you, lamarquemomma@aol.com? No, Timmy, I don't hold any "resentment" against anybody for their actions. You see, when someone does something stupid, that's usually a good indicator of their intelligence. If they do something reckless, likewise, it is a demonstration of their irresponsiblity. But if someone willingly scoffs at social and civil values that are important enough to be written up as laws, it says a truckload about that person's character, none of it good.

So why would I resent "cool" people like you, Timmy? I would much rather expose these "cool" people for what they really are so the "real" people can make a more accurate character assessment.

Tim, I know it's not you it is Randy he has created the screen name of wa3moj@aol from his aol account and is playing games thats why he is using it in his email addy because otherwise he would be forging a sure TOS violation. He also is the xganon poster thats not hard to figure.

I'm not a pirate radio operator. Neither is Steve.

No, it proves that in more than three weeks I haven't heard anything

Yes here is where the infatuation occurs, LOL it consumed Landshark so much he killfiled me and couldn't stop himself from replying to me. I see a pattern developing here. First you make up an aol account with the wa3moj callsign, you then start posting to the NG with the wa3moj addy, next you start making up posts about conversations between us, your mistake was posting using the email address as your own which tells me you are the one who made up that wa3moj Aol account. You then post from (xgnon?) anonymously trolling the NG with all types of posts. I see your game Randy create havoc then blame George , Doug and Aaron. Funny part is your not that bright and got popped, not hard to put 2 and 2 together.
I can feel the love.

Not that I want to be a part of the name calling in this thread. But. Unless you plan on running a well filtered radio, such as a kenwood, Yaesu or Icom, I wouldn't advise running one of these... for one, your typicial Galaxy, Ranger, Uniden, export type rigs won't provide the drive, also.... when your dealing with these type of radio the filtering is just not there... and you could run into some massive tvi problems. I suggest a filter by RF Inquiry, called a Common Mode filter, sold by AES, and also a nice filter made by Nye-Viking, if you can find one of the older "tuneable" one's all the Better! but these are rare... I run 2 Nye-Vikings and a Common Mode.

It's OK, George. I know I own you, you know I own you. But hey, I'll play along with your little "manly" charade so that Nancy doesn't find out. It's just between us, OK.

Thank You for the info Chuck.
I thought when looking at the thread , there would be a answer , But Damn !
Any way , I was planning on running a Cobra 142 and drive it with a Varmint 650xl . Are You saying that the cobra may not have adequate filtering ? And do You think I have enough drive for this amp?.
I do have a Yaesu 101e . Would it work?
I also have a Moon raker beam with a 10,000 watt gamma match . It has been modified with 6 elements . Will this be ok? and how many watts do You think I will be able to do ?

No problem! I do more than just argue with Doug in here... :->

But Damn !

LOL!

...Any way , I was planning on running a Cobra 142 and drive it with a Varmint
...650xl .

That Cobra idea sounds good. But that Varmint idea... eeek! I'd use a one of those Blue faced palomar modulators, they make a variable version, that varmint amp might over drive the 4-1000's

.....Are You saying that the cobra may not have adequate filtering ?
And
...do You think I have enough drive for this amp?.

Well... I'd really look into some External TVI filters, like a Nye-Viking. or the RF Inquiry or Both! (I'd get both!)

as far the drive issue, see above.

...I do have a Yaesu 101e . Would it work?

I wouldn't run that rig on cb.... Narrow assed recieve and if someone is slighty off frequency, they'll sound like they got cotton in thier mouth! (at least this was my experience with my dad's FT-101EX, that he used to own, years ago...) now if you were on Sideband, that'd be another story...

...I also have a Moon raker beam with a 10,000 watt gamma match . It has been ...modified with 6 elements . Will this be ok? and how many watts do You think
...I will be able to do ?

How many tubes? and if the SWR on the Antenna is okay, you should fine.

you going to build this puppy? or buy one?

Now I need a smoke!

Here is how it works...

The best antenna is a 9' quarter wave for the car. Anything else is a LOADED quarter wave and don't perform as well.

If you go with a loaded quarter wave, which MOST do including myself (because a 9' whip is not pratical), then the Wilson antennas are the best!

The 5000 was made for bigger watts. Then the 1000, the 500, and the "little wil". While the 5000 is a little better than the 1000, I would get the 1000! It is a great antenna!

For the car, the WILSON 1000. Period.

A beginner antenna for the house is the Antron 99. This is not a great antenna, but it works well. The IMAX is also an option along the same lines as the A-99 (Sorry Tim).

If you want a real performer for the house, the Interceptor 10K is the only logical choice. You will pay dearly for it, but it is worth every penny!

Nothing, they will just sit here whining about it.

It's a good thing for the "Anti Keyclowns" that they are not running a proper organisation, with a requirement to show how they spend their time and resources... how many years have they been whining, with no real results.
All those years and the people they call "Keyclowns" are still here, they still use what they want, they still sell or buy what they want and the "Antis" still have no credibility.

The only thing they manage to do is to fill the newsgroup with arguments with those who will not just block them. Notice that Georgina changed her header... I wiped her out without even reading her message, she really is that meaningless.

Regards,

Peter.

a single 4X1 in grounded grid with 3000V on the plate will do about 1500 watts with about 130watts drive and will suck down about 12 amps so you better start looking for a pole transformer to steal for a pair.....

Now it is time for the truth...

The Fransis CB-28x is called the "Wheeler Dealer". It comes in multiple colors (white orange black).

The Fransis CB-50 is called the "Amazer" and only comes in Gray.

Both of these antennas have a "TRIPLE QUARTER WAVE" and are 8'.

"Three Multiphase Solid Copper Linear Elements Sealed Inside
Pultruded High Strength Machine
Tapered 8' Solid Fiberglass Rod Offers A True Triple Quarter Wave Antenna"

The three elements are in phase with eachother. It is NOT a 3/4 wave antenna as the old rumor used to say. It can handle more power due to the extra metal inside.

The CB-28 and CB-50 are the same except for color.

The shorter "Hot Rod" antennas only have a "DOUBLE QUARTER WAVE".

Dino

Now you know the rest of the story.

You don't really want to use a pole pig. You can get a Peter Dahl or someone else's that would be far better size and regulation wise. Also, you'll want to put upwards of 4 thousand volts on this tube. Remember this tube has a screen grid and you can use it to lessen the drive requirements. However, using the screen means another well regulated power supply. You're in for a lot of work, lots of money and lethal high voltages.

I would suggest solid state based on the amount of power you will get out of this amp, not to mention the trouble, the cost and the danger factor. Good luck.

That'll be tough to do on a 23 channel AM only garage radio. And even with my "good" equipment, unless the DX is running (which generally means the radio is off), I don't think I'll hear your group. There was a decent group on 36 LSB in my area, but most of them upgraded to ham status and have moved to the lower end of 2 meters on USB.

Once the DX is out for the long haul, I'm hoping that some decent local activity starts up again...

And the hams around here complain that there's nobody on the old

Exactly. The DX ran the low power locals off the band.

That would have been my quote, thank you... And it has as much to do with CB radio as does this entire thread... Not a damn thing; as for such reason, I am ceasing contributions to it.

Enjoy Randy! I liked how it "consumed" me, I post twice a day, when George Busch WA3MOJ is on here all during the day, posting on average 200+ times in a month........ROTFLMAO!.....what a troll George is. All the harassing, sexual innuendo, racist, accusatory style posts made towards practically everyone here.
He's an extra class ham operator that talks like this here, because he can't on the ham bands and in person, the true epitome of a troll, why else would he have some 250+ screen nics and change it on average every 6 days.
So please George, spew your normal foul language and have fun troll.....

If you are implying that people, who
hold ham licenses, should be somehow
held to a higher moral standard than
the "common man", then that would
be faulty logic. A ham license is only
a "permit" to use radio, it is not a
"badge of morality".

Absolutly correcto-mundo! Short of using a 102" whip,(which i use as im unwilling to settle for anything less), the wilson 5000 has to be the hands down winner in the base load dept. The single biggest reason its so good is not due to any magical engineering though. Just look at the length of the whip that comes with this antenna.They are running the longest whip of any base load on the market. The only thing about running a mag mount on this beauty though is the fact that youll get a high s.w.r. if you run over a couple of hundred watts.(its hard to get a good enough ground through the magnets and through the paint on the vehicle) Aside from this fact,its a damn good alternative to the longer whip antennas. gunslinger :)

I just tested it with the 101e and I think I have some problems.
First of all it pegged My 2000 watt dosy meter then it tripped the breaker , After resetting the breaker My swr went through the roof . and My dosy won't read watts now I checked the antenna with a analyzer and no good , Looked at the ant. and found the coax melted from the pl259 on the antron and also I tried to remove what was left from the ant and it just all came apart with very little effort .
So now it looks like I need to put the moonraker up and throw the antron in the trash.
Even though the first test tore up some shit , The amp does work.

911. OT- Doctors are more dangerous than guns

Think about this....
a. The number of physicians in the US is 700,000.
b. Accidental deaths caused by physicians per year is 120,000.
c. Accidental deaths per physician is 0.171.
(U.S. Department of Health & Human Services)

Then think about this:
a. The number of gun owners in the US is 80,000,000.
b. The number of accidental gun deaths per year (all age groups) is 1,500.
c. The number of accidental deaths per gun owner is ..0000188.

Statistically, doctors are approximately 9,000 times more dangerous than gun owners.

FACT: NOT EVERYONE HAS A GUN, BUT ALMOST EVERYONE HAS AT LEAST ONE DOCTOR.

Please alert your friends to this alarming threat.
We must ban doctors before this gets out of hand.

dude i hope you noticed real quick that you burnt up the antron or you might be buying new tubes. throw away the dosy. theres no real way to tune your amp with it. you need a RMS meter like a bird for something this big. if you want to run a omni antenna get something like a starduster withough a loading coil so there wont be anything to burn up. oh yeah no dinky ass coax any more either. when you have a amp this big it is not plug and play. lots of things have to be done prior to even the first key down.

Tim, I am staying out of Dougs problem with Chuck, I have never had any conversations with the man, but at the same time I personally do not have any reasons to dislike him. Call me wierd but I try to get along with many people, many of those that I consider close friends would not get along together if we were all in a room at the same time. I do not tell people how to live their lives and I ask that people give me the same respect.

I enjoy radio as a hobby, I enjoyed CB for many years, some of my best friends are still on CB, and have no interest in amateur radio, and just because I have a license does not make me any better than they are because they don't. When I am on CB I leave my ticket on the wall, when I am on amateur I leave my CB on the side. One of the people that got me into amateur radio I met on CB, he was a novice class license at the time, and has since upgraded. He still likes to get on CB once in a while.

Let me say this, whether you run legal or not, if you have a ticket or not, I will not strike out at anyone, unless they strike at me first. I have had my disagreements with many in here, and usually when I do, I take it up in email rather then perpetuate the crap in here. Sure I have blown my top on here a few times, I am by no means perfect.

Take care, and good luck with the storm heading your way, if it gets serious and I am called up I will be there to assist in anyway I can.

For all those going to Findlay, and have not met me, I can be contacted on 2m simplex, use the calling freq and we can move to another. When I am not walking around you can most likely find me around the Red Cross first aid station (hint- it is a big white panel van with a red cross on it), my name tag will have my call on it, and I will be wearing a blue cap with the Red Cross logo on the front, and a blue t-shirt that says F.D.N.Y. Disaster Assistance Response Team on the back.

And if anyone there would like tickets for the monday night Indians game, I have a bunch left, unfortunately I will not be able to make it :/ last minut changes in schedule, but Mopar will be there, I was looking forward to watching the game (I quit drinking so I would have been drinking cola) and having a drink with him.

Yes dweebo, but the a-99 is a piece of splattery garbage that uses false ad claims. The maco is neither.

Watching these guys go back and forth reminds me of the old days on the CB. Idle threats and tough talk, but no action to back it up.

Save your hamfest admission, guys. There ain't gonna be no fights. Nothing's gonna happen. They'll just continue to babble on in this forum, each accusing the other of not showing up, being a chicken, etc.

Been there, seen and heard this a million times. Just a bunch of newsgroup Rambos, hiding behind a keyboard. yawn

Maybe that was your perspective but not mine. I usually got along fine with just about everyone. Except, of course, those few that just seem to be angry at everyone and the world. I certainly wasn't what you might call 'popular'; I wasn't a social butterfly, I hung out in the chemistry lab a lot, and I would usually defend an undefended position in a discussion. Like, in one class the subject was communisim (Ken Pelo's class, as a matter of fact). While everyone was being a good American and renouncing communism as an 'evil' system, I took the other corner and tried to explain the benefits of collectivism and a socialized government. Not a very smart thing to do in an era when air-raid siren tests are conducted every day at noon.

Keep dreaming, Timmy. I have never backed down from a fight in my life. I would talk to you the same way in person, and if you felt that my words were worth fighting over, I would be happy to oblige. So if you should ever visit this corner of the continent you have an open invitation to stop by for an earfull. The only difference is that, in the newsgroups, people like you can't throw a tantrum and slam the door while running away from the truth being told to your face.

>what towns that frank? it was probably the only school in town lol

Spokane has quite a few high schools, and the valley has a few more.

>i dont watch television or movies much so i wouldnt know or care

That's obvious. It's also obvious that you don't read much, either. Except, of course, CB newsgroups. Too bad, because you are probably one of the few keyclowns that has a few brains. But your attitude and dope-smoking are quickly changing that situation. All that potential and you choose to waste it. What a shame.

That's not lack of 'street smarts', that's lack of common sense. When somebody offers you a deal too good to be true, it probably is. Sometimes it's just plain greed that gets people in trouble, like these get-rich-quick scams, and when they don't work they whine to their district attorney or 60 minutes (oh yeah, I forgot already, you don't watch TV).

>yes just like me whether on my moms name, my own name or the 5 others belonging

Then why didn't you ebay that amp under your "real internet identity"? And what was up with that crappy photography? All the pics on your site are at least in focus, so what was wrong with that amp that you didn't want people to see?

You could be a man by thinking for yourself instead of following the herd, by living life with a little integrity instead of a lot of weed, by earning your HF privileges instead of stealing the airwaves, by setting higher standards for yourself and actually working to achieve those standards instead of your half-assed efforts to find the easy ways to get through life. Maybe then you will find out that life isn't a struggle, it's a gift. And who knows, you might even attract a real woman instead of a two-bit skank. Hey, life is full of possibilities. You just have to make it happen instead of sitting on your stoned ass half the day and waiting for the lottery numbers to be called.

So they use more than one name, using several different accounts, now you're on the hook for more than 200 bucks. Sounds to me like your business is "Crook Friendly". With any luck Tim every "paper hanger" in town will read about it in this news group, and will stop in to give you the business. Plus you what me to believe that at a pay rate close to minimun wage you can't have a store clerk like you parked on a bench seat in the cort room to recover what amouts to 4 times or more your hourly wages for an 8 hour day does not pay? Get real.

You live in a world of your own dreams Tim. The only thing that has come out of this sub-thread with you is the fact that you're going to squirm around, and try to come up with some lame logic, to explain why you wouldn't call the police for getting burned by a criminal passing bad checks. Because if you did admit to calling the police than you would be exposed as the hypocrite you really are. Thus by running to the law that you so despise on one hand, and willfully ignore on the other when it's your criminal activity being discussed, your hypocrisy becomes indefensible. You would be reminded endlessly by various parties in this news group, and they in turn would enjoy reminding you to no end.

You think the rest of them would still have the same idea that the FCC is just a joke when it came around to Part 95 violations? China does it with drug dealers, and they don't have anywhere nearly the problem we do in this country. It has it points. In those middle east countries, where they have strict Muslim laws, you get caught stealing they slice off one of your hands. You may think my comment is funny, however they do extreme things elsewhere for real.

Weeellllllllll if you already have the amp why did you not post more of the operating parametere....LIke what is the HV spply.....Cant be much of a spply for a pair of 4X1's if you can even carry it in one piece.....I think you need to learn a little bit before you start messing with this kind of stuff....you are now dealing with deadly voltages and I might add more sensitive than fireing off a Texas Star.....you can crisp that amp in about a second if one of many parameters is not right...you blow a tube or cap string and you will find out real quick you are not going to take it to a cb shop to fix......Ask a lot of questions before playing with this toy.....IF it actually exists

How would you know I'm "much older" than Steve if you haven't looked?
Dimbulb. And you cannot prove I've ever run a pirate station, can you?

BTW, your "hero" Aanal Aaron still thinks I'm Steve. How about that?

A pair of GRID-DRIVEN 4-1000A's running at 6KV on the plates and 500V on the screens will produce about 4,000 watts with less than 10 watts of drive if the plate power supply can source at least 1 ampere of plate current.

The 4PR-1000A's are much more rugged and were designed for pulsed power like in RADAR systems. Those tubes can produce power pulses in excess of 200,000 watts PER TUBE and last forever in normal applications.

I've read that a C1969 final can replace the MRF 477 at the cost of some power loss. What circuit changes would have to be made to accomodate the 1969?

Hi Jamey, My name is Woody Parr and I'm up the road in Cornelia. I'm afraid that I'm indirectly responsible for this troll who is badmouthing you at alt.religion.urantiabook. You see he was only there in the first place to attack me.

This idiot is Steven J. Rogovich, 1612 Lake Christopher dr. Virginia Beach, Va. 23464 He followed me to the UB usenet page from alt.radio.pirate He and I (were) both formerly loosely associated with each other in the shortwave pirate radio listening hobby. I USED to be a shortwave pirate but my station has been permanently retired for more than 2 years now. Stevie is still a pirate and is the operator of the station Radio Free Speech. He is also the moderator of a message board at the Free Radio Network < www.frn.net > and goes by the handle of Pat Murphy there. I had a falling out with the people at the FRN a couple of years ago as they became corrupt and were doing so inappropriate things. I dared to open my mouth and openly complain about there stupid activities which since they havn't yet ceased to follow me around the internet anywhere they can and attack me.

Steve is also on the usenet trolling people under the name of Richard Cranium (richardcranus@yahoo.com) He's far too much of a coward to debate anyone using his real name.

In an emergency, almost anything can go - even if you loose the radio later. You won't get fined in an emergency. The Denali peak repeater is on 146.760 while the wilderness protocol simplex frequency is 146.52 as the primary frequency. This is generally intended if you are out of repeater range. My guess is use the Denali peak repeater since a handheld's range is pretty low without the use of a repeater located up pretty high.

One other point, Arthur. The original post was from Germany. Without a license, he might have a tough time bringing an amateur radio transceiver into the US (customs). If he gets his equivalent to the US codeless tech, he'll be set as Germany is one of the countries with which we have a reciprocal licenseing agreement.

Yes but it a well know fact that a top-loaded whip can out perform a base load. I had a great deal of success with a 4.5 ft Antron whip with a tuneable tip. I tried a 5ft unknown top-loader and had the same good results. Now I'm trying one of the hybrid Davemade whips and a Nuggetron too. Stands about 6 ft. Fact is, the longer the whip the better the performance. Base loads suffer from heat exhaustion!

Theoretically 27.405 is the lowest frequency in the 10meter band but the FCC gave it to 11meter so they did'nt have to build 39 channel radios.
My question is how are they classifying 27.600
-27.800 as 11meter.
Correct me if i'm wrong (which i probably am) but woud'nt this lead people to believe that frequencies above 27.405 and below 28.100
are fair game for unlicensed radio operators?
Maybe i fell asleep during class but i thought that particular group of frequencies was not allocated for use by "Joe Public".
Maybe it's just late and i should get some rest because i'm not thinking (or seeing) clearly.

I don't know where you found that info. Many of the ham bands are dislocated from their metric designations. Here's a neat little chart
I found on the net a few years ago:

Designators Freq range Real Lengths Des-freq
============================== ================================
160m band 1.8-2.0 MHz 166.67-150.0m 1.875MHz
80m band 3.5-4.0 MHz 85.7-75.0m 3.750MHz
40m band 7.0-7.3 MHz 42.86-41.1m 7.500MHz
30m band 10.1-10.15 MHz 29.7-29.56m 10.000MHz
20m band 14.0-14.35 MHz 21.43-20.91m 15.000MHz
17m band 18.068-18.168 MHz 16.6-16.51m 17.647MHz
15m band 21.0-21.45 MHz 14.29-13.99m 20.000MHz
12m band 24.89-24.99 MHz 12.05-12.0m 25.000MHz
10m band 28.0-29.7 MHz 10.71-10.1m 30.000MHz
6m band 50-54 MHz 6.0-5.56m 50.000MHz
2m band 144-148 MHz 2.08-2.03m 150.000MHz
1.25m band 222-225 MHz 1.35-1.33m 240.000MHz
70cm band 420-450 MHz 71.43-66.67cm 428.571MHz
33cm band 902-928 MHz 33.26-32.33cm 909.090MHz

So I don't know how you figure that 27.405 is the bottom of the 10M band. And don't forget that the CB actually extends to 27.410 because of the channel's bandwidth.

> but the FCC
>gave it to 11meter so they did'nt have to build 39 channel radios.

Ok, where did you get the information for THAT conclusion? Are you just making this stuff up as you go?

>My question is how are they classifying 27.600
>-27.800 as 11meter.

See above. It seems that as long as it's close, it's ok.
(Close...horseshoes, hand-grenades, and ham-bands.)

If I understand the question (while noting that the 10M band begins at 28.000 MHz, not 28.100 MHz), anything they think they can get away with is "fair game", and certainly not limited to the 'freeband'. The spread between 27.410 and 28.000 is actually a 'buffer zone'. It's there to keep the splatter from each band interfering with the other. So it has a purpose, and that purpose is not as an 'overflow zone' for disgruntled CBers and ham wannabees.

But illegal operators usually gravitate toward a band that needs only cheap and readily available equipment which is easy to operate with only a second-grade education. The FCC made the CB a 'plug-n-play' band, which is very attractive to the person with too much money, too few brains, and little or no civil responsibility. Since there are so many people that fit that description, it's just natural that the CB will be crowded with both potential and practicing pirates. And as a matter of course, those unlicensed operators are going to spill over the edges of the band. How far they extend themselves is really up to the FCC, but the larger the 'freeband' becomes, the more intense will be the activity, and the harder it will be for the FCC to control. Personally, I think the FCC lost control when they removed the license requirement for CB radio. They should bring it back.

Excuse me, "Bobbie-girl", but if the claim against you was false, why was your account cancelled? And what makes you think I send it?

You've been on the usenet for years, bobbie-girl, and anybody can do a search to prove that. Just search for Radio Bob and/or rbcn1.

Hi Jamey, My name is Woody Parr and I'm up the road in Cornelia. I'm afraid that I'm indirectly responsible for this troll who is badmouthing you at alt.religion.urantiabook. You see he was only there in the first place to attack me.

This idiot is Steven J. Rogovich, 1612 Lake Christopher dr. Virginia Beach, Va. 23464 He followed me to the UB usenet page from alt.radio.pirate He and I (were) both formerly loosely associated with each other in the shortwave pirate radio listening hobby. I USED to be a shortwave pirate but my station has been permanently retired for more than 2 years now. Stevie is still a pirate and is the operator of the station Radio Free Speech. He is also the moderator of a message board at the Free Radio Network < www.frn.net > and goes by the handle of Pat Murphy there. I had a falling out with the people at the FRN a couple of years ago as they became corrupt and were doing so inappropriate things. I dared to open my mouth and openly complain about there stupid activities which since they havn't yet ceased to follow me around the internet anywhere they can and attack me.

Steve is also on the usenet trolling people under the name of Richard Cranium (richardcranus@yahoo.com) He's far too much of a coward to debate anyone using his real name.

at 3350 watts and I think that will do Me . a Friend of mine came over and built a diepold for 11 mtr and fired it up with a 4000 watt meter in line and She did it. He says He can make it do more than that , But that is fine

The SWR is still the same - but the coax resistive losses mask that fact.

Uh, if you bothered to try to comprehend what was originally written, you would discover that the person had tried to work things out with the neighbor - and got the door slammed in his face. If that were to happen to me, I would not make any further attempts. I would be afraid that any further attempt might escalate into a physical assault by that person.

Contacting the local counsel would be the proper next step.

By the way - if the person is playing CDs, records or tapes, then a CB rig (or other RF source) is unlikely to interfere.

Neither forward or reflected power should have any effect on the OK, Brian. Except for the noise floor, what difference does it make whether the person is running 1 watt or 1000 watts?

That approximate 3% (if I remember the numbers correctly) additional loss over straight coax losses is not going to make any difference - most likely not even in QRP situations.

They haven't stopped anything. I still talk skip every day and keydown everyday. So stop what. As I have said before they are doing absolutely nothing to the guys that never even come on this group. They talk with big watts all the time and never even heard of some faggot antboy. Hey look there are enough keydowns going around all they have to do if they are serious and not just like to type bullshit on a newsgroup. Go to a keydown and either voice your displeasure with the event or whatever gets your panties all wet and see if you (or all of you) can make a difference. I am quite sure they will stay on this group where they can insult and talk about sexual acts and change their names and emails. Because it gives these sad individuals a sense of power. How sad that they have nothing else to do to occupy their time. Perhaps read a good book. So go ahead and answer this message with whatever negative comeback you want but, the fact still remains that you antiboys will never do anything but bitch and moan on this group. Your whining never touches the real cb world. What to do now?

You forget that one of the goals of the 9/11 terrorists is to bring their third world way of life here. Given the way our own government is reacting, the so called "TIPS" program, freer wire tapping by the local PD, FBI, etc. Dave-and-Debbie's nonsense ramblings about secret police etc. aren't so funny any more.

Subject: Dougs Radio and Usenet Pledge for AKC members

I disburse obscenity with redundant banality. Emails I have plenty of, authentic and phantom both.
I manage this well, sometimes crossposting my mundane matter to several newsgroups to loathe.
I want and wish only to take your band-width with my helpless and impotent rants, while you are stuck holding the bill by downloading my garbage,
you see, its all in my plans.
My foes are many, and none would be blamed or held accountable if they were to crack my skull, after all the threats of violence I have made against you, but they were never dull.
I cant stand to lose an argument or even a debate, even though I am quite used to it and always filled with hate.
Valid points when called to my attention are are so often redirected, this prevents the world you see, from seeing me corrected.
My education may be ok, even somewhat impressive,
but it consists of only things I see,
I cant always cope with reality.
I discuss only that which can feed my wounded ego, to go above and beyond, I just may strain and blow.
The bile I project forth is funny, under the guise of sometimes-assistance, and all are well aware, what really gets me mad, is myself-imposed impotence.
If I were to gain a life as most suggest, I wouldnt be here daily, putting myself to the test.
If only dad werent an abusive drunk, I could have been a smarter lunk.
If only I knew how to cope I wouldnt be such a dope.
If only I wasnt such a coward, I may have a lover by a name other than Howard.
If only I really liked myself and didnt slash my wrists, I might even have been successful and found everlasting bliss.
If I could learn to hold my tongue or become a bit more grammatical,
I wouldnt come across as such an ash-hole fanatical who is always problematical.
If only I could learn to hold an intelligent debate, would I still be a pussy behind a keyboard, that all have learned to hate?
If only you could understand what caused me to be this mess, my secrets they run very deep, to the point I wear a dress.
I dont mind being a cbers pet, normal people dont always sit around, always on the internet.

Glad you've got your asbestos long johns on ;)
First, when 11 meters WAS a ham band (back in the early 50s), it was still 11 meters. The designations are only approximate. It was then made the citizens' band and is STILL 11 meters. The other post in here is good in that it gives you an idea of the actual wavelengths vs frequency. In any case, 10 meters runs from 28.000 to 29.700 and is strictly amateur radio worldwide. The actual 11 meter frequencies vary by country. This is one reason of 'export' radios. The frequencies which are illegal to use in our country (USA) are legal in other countries. I've seen the various designations and perhaps someone would be kind enough to supply the groups with a URL or a list of frequencies broken down by country if you have access to either. It can get confusing as what is illegal in one area is legal in another!

Hope this helps a bit (but, c'mon - someone supply some URLs!)

This is simple.

The best CB for a trucker is anything made by Uniden. They are more stable and have better boards than anything!

The Galaxy/RCI/etc... are made cheaply. Yes they work, nut it is MY opinion the Uniden chassis are better.

STAY AWAY FROM ANYTHING NEW WITH THE COBRA NAME!!!! Uniden USED to make the boards for Dynascan. Now they come from the same place as the above mentioned export radios.

PC-78 for AM only.
Grant XL for SSB.

If you can pump enough current through the winding to saturate the core, it doesn't matter if it's used for impedance matching or as a bird perch -- the core still saturates.

Not true. I was even given an Antron 99 which I got installed this last week. I STILL haven't heard this massive problem on ten meters. Which proves that Georgie-girl is hallucinating, exaggerating, or just plain lying about the problem. Probably the latter. There may be the occasional "intruder", but it certainly is not the problem he'd like you to think it is.

And is there no other frequency he could use? You mean his Collins is stuck on 28.015? Try some WD-40, Georgie-girl.

You've been on the usenet for years, bobbie-girl, and anybody can do a

Hi Jamey, My name is Woody Parr and I'm up the road in Cornelia. I'm afraid that I'm indirectly responsible for this troll who is badmouthing you at alt.religion.urantiabook. You see he was only there in the first place to attack me.

This idiot is Steven J. Rogovich, 1612 Lake Christopher dr. Virginia Beach, Va. 23464 He followed me to the UB usenet page from alt.radio.pirate He and I (were) both formerly loosely associated with each other in the shortwave pirate radio listening hobby. I USED to be a shortwave pirate but my station has been permanently retired for more than 2 years now. Stevie is still a pirate and is the operator of the station Radio Free Speech. He is also the moderator of a message board at the Free Radio Network < www.frn.net > and goes by the handle of Pat Murphy there. I had a falling out with the people at the FRN a couple of years ago as they became corrupt and were doing so inappropriate things. I dared to open my mouth and openly complain about there stupid activities which since they havn't yet ceased to follow me around the internet anywhere they can and attack me.

Steve is also on the usenet trolling people under the name of Richard Cranium (richardcranus@yahoo.com) He's far too much of a coward to debate anyone using his real name.

I am not quite sure why you included me in this, as I never made any comment suggesting I was going to be involved in any altercation at Findlay. Like I said in another thread, I personally have no reason to have a beef with anyone here, sure we have all had our disagreements but I much prefer to settle them over a cup of coffee. I am actually looking forward to meeting some of the guys on here, it's nice to be able to put a face with the name. Even Doug and I have had our disagreements, like some of his comments about me and some of the organizations I volunteer with back when I started hanging in here.

I simply am not the type of person to resort to violence.

Think of me what you wish Mr TooManyRadios.

Hello Scott:

I suggest you use LMR-400 made by Time Microwave, I have used this coax on a Gazillion antennas. It costs approx 70 cents a foot at HRO Stores, but has very low loss, easy to solder, and will last many many years. Its always cheaper to have the good stuff in the long run.

Its the good stuff. Here are a few web sites that have the Good coax.

Jay is exactly right on the LMR-400, but the loss at 26-28 Mhz is very low.
That cable is pretty much overkill, except if you are planning on using some serious power. Good luck.

Does someone have a readable President Jackson schematic? I already have a schematic, but the print quality is too poor to read the parts values.

Thank you,

The fired driver did NOT work for ABF. The company is Cheetah Transportation, a company from Mooresville, NC. I posted it here because it had to do with out of band operations similar to the ABF situation.

1041. Another city passes CB ordinance

RADIO LAW: LANCASTER OHIO HAS NEW CB CONTROL LAW

Lancaster Ohio now has a new City Ordinance to put teeth into local enforcement of the FCC's Part 95 CB radio rules. The measure was passed on August 26th and is the handi-work of Lancaster City Law Director David Trimmer and a local area radio amateur named John Hilliard, W8OF. The two put the legislation together over the last several months and sent it twice to the FCC office in Farmington Hills, Michigan for review and comments.

Under the law, CB radio users who operate on what's termed as an unlawful frequency or using excessively powerful equipment could be cited for a misdemeanor, with a maximum penalty of 180 days in jail and a $1,000 fine. Ham radio operators are exempted because the city says that they are trained, licensed, are regulated differently under federal law.

City officials estimate there are at least 250 people operating 11 meter Class D CB radios in Lancaster and not all follow FCC rules. The city's law will give prosecutors a tool to fight these abuses. The FCC believes that Lancaster is the first municipality to enact such a far-reaching ordinance to regulate CB radio within the city limits. (ARNewslineT from information supplied by W8OF)

Yes, I've heard this too however I have yet to see any specific conversion plans to mount/ hookup the 455. I understand it is quite an undertaking though and that's why I'm considering the 1969 at the loss of some power output. I think with the 1969, I'd have to change at least the output circuitry and I was looking for some suggestions from someone who might have done it.

Appreciate your input!

Even with myself being a CBer, and an occasional "Freebander," I think you are an idiot. You are the type of moron that gives CBers a bad name. People playing with their roger beeps? It's called Morse Code, idiot! It's a legitimate form of communications used by those licensed to use the band, unlike yourself. It's your type that cause problems for the rest of us by going into the amateur bands where you don't belong. "Freebanding," although still illegal, is one thing, but when you play in a Ham's territory, you are only asking for trouble. Get a clue, a life, and an education! It's obvious you need it...

It appears that both Power House and Kenneth have drawn lines for themselves, but their lines are not in the same place. Have either of you two ever hear of the word "cooperation"? That's when everyone agrees on the locations of these 'lines' so nobody is causing anyone else any grief. By some strange coincidence, it just so happens that the FCC has already drawn up some lines that most people can live with! And to remove any doubt as to the locations of these lines, they have written them up as laws. Of course there are going to be some malcontents, misfits, and just plain lazy people that will consider themselves to be above the law and draw their own lines. Kinda scary when you think about it -- people that view federal laws as mere 'suggestions'. If people start thinking that they have some sort of right to set standards in contradiction to the law -- i.e, draw their own lines -- where will it stop? And what moral right can one claim when they say it's ok to operate illegally but not 'too illegally'?
How illegal do you have to be before it's considered wrong?

Sad thing was, this whole thing came about mostly as the result of 1 CB'er, once again! Lancaster Ohio area is where I live, and there are actually very few "abusers", but of course.. we had one guy.. in a downtown residential neighborhood .(duh!).. who decided he was gonna override the truckers on Ch 19, so he bought himself a linear and played it on his base.. repeatedly, during the daytime.. at night, whenever, when he was on, he had it on. ..real smart.... I'm a good 10 miles away from him, and he would peg my S-meter... it was only a matter of time. Other than that, we only hear the occasional "big radio" around here, and it's usually in mobiles. Don't know why in this area, we can talk fine without them.. I've played radio around here for years, and no one ever attracted the attention he did in 1 month..but oh well.. they'll get back to playing the straight radio's like me! :-)

Of course now...As the article said even tho there are an estimated 250 CB'ers... and one big mouth... we'll all get the rep .. everyone will think that ALL CB'ers are the cause... I even see the officers glancing in my car window when I'm parked downtown, I'm sure because of my antenna. So me, a legal playing, long time CB'er.. never been arrested in my life, am being checked out by officers because of someone else's offense.

the "10 meter band," but the wavelengths are closer to 11 meters rather than 10.

Not really. The band actually has allocations for legitimate users.
It is not "wasted space," although you rarely hear legitimate users in that frequency range.

> But illegal operators usually gravitate toward a band that needs only

I think one of the main problems with CB, and probably why most hams look down upon the band, is that anyone & everyone who wants to can get a transceiver and start transmitting. This in itself isn't bad, but most new users have no idea how to go about talking to someone.
Unless they have a friend who they can regularly communicate with, they usually end up endlessly asking for radio checks or "10-36's" just to see if anyone will answer them. When the regular CBer's get tired of the endless radio & time checks and stop answering, the newbie CBer becomes resentful at being ignored and resorts to deadkeying, playing music, harassment, and generally trying to become noticed by making a jerk out of himself. When you get enough of these people on the band, it starts to appear that CB is nothing more than a radio service for people with nothing to say.

I think instead of bringing back the license requirement, which CBer's would ignore and the FCC wouldn't enforce anyway, CB manufacturers should include a "how to communicate via CB" pamphlet with every new radio. Then maybe people would find better ways to start a conversation rather than resorting to the radio check/10-36 route. Of course, as with internet trolls, there will always be those who just want to make noise, but at least more people would realize that CB can be an effective communications tool or a fun hobby.

Well, you must be stupid for your type of logic.
If nobody placed a bid before there was any action,
would there ever be a bid?

Also, please investigate your shill accusations.
You are being little slanderous, and I would like for you to back up your statements.

I apologize if I ruffled any feathers, but you certainly don't come close to answering my question.

WHY is it such a crime for me to try to sell one for $50 minimum if they cost $500 new?

If you don't have an answer, shut the hell up.

I didn't realize you could get them so cheap at a hamfest.
But then, I've never been in the market for one.
Would it have been any different had I started the minimum bid lower? I had to start it somewhere. 10% of new price seemed like a good place to begin. If nobody wanted it,
I would try again at a lower price.

As for asking for trouble Ham territory is one of the safest places to play.
Rabbit ears did everything he could to get busted and it took him 3 long years of hard work to get the fcc to do anything! And that was only after ramming another persons car. I could park my big rig outside uncle charlies watts in Ham land with impunity. But transmit one watt on a comercial band and your house will look like the compound at Waco:)

I think what I heard on 27.445 was actually some sort of propagation beacon, Bill. I hear the noise from 25 to 28 MHz almost every time 11 meters is open. The best description I've heard of the "radar" was from a freebander who described it as "gorilla farts." Sure got the folks on 27.445 riled up, whatever it was.

What is the ordinance? And does the council even have jurisdiction?
As for big radios. In trucking a lot of freight move between the lakes area and the NYC tristate area. Most truckers that go to NYC need at least a 20 watt radio just to comunicate short range. A 4 watt radio is utterly useless..believe me I know. I had a legal radio and in the NYC area it was useless.
City councils are famous for coming out with the most anal laws imaginable. Among truckers the Ohio state police are universally despised as the worst state police dept on the planet. Ironically Pennsylvania State Police garner great respect and good will among the trucking community

Yes, Dale, that is the bad thing about it. A few malcontents give the entire avocation a bad rap.
I never was in favor of local law getting involved in radio enforcement because it takes a bit more knowledge to know what radio is illegal, what's not, how to pinpoint interference, etc. It is a bit more complicated than pointing at someone's roof and saying, "Ah ha!
There's an antenna; it must be the guy." The cops then knock on the innocent CBer's door, maybe write him a ticket for disturbing, etc, and the real perp is peeping out the window snickering. Or they might tell a ham (exempt by Federal law), that "Ah'm thuh law roun' h'yar, an' you're a-gonna do whut ah say".
I think eventually as more cities and towns become aware of this, more will get on the bandwagon, and the more likely some innocent CBer will be mistakenly blamed for "interference".

It has to do with the Public Law signed in the fall of 2000 by President Clinton which allows local jurisdictions to pass ordinances/statutes to abate interference from CB stations. It is targeted at linears, illegally modified radios, or other operations outside the FCC rules. As of that law, they DO now have the right to pass and enforce such statutes whereby they can respond to complaints of CB interference (Amateur stations are exempt from local ordinances and must be referred to FCC directly). Eventually, if the intrusions onto other bands doesn't stop, you can certainly expect other measures to be taken against truckers and the vendors of illegal equipment. Like, perhaps, an amendment to this law to allow for inspection of radio equipment at weight stations by DOT?

I sometimes monitor a local net on 27.445 MHz, here on LI as well. The "interference" is pretty noticeable here too, and yes...it IS kinda funny to listen to.

They are exempt by Federal law from actions against them by local cops.
IOW, if a CBer is blanking out Mr. Jones' TV, the local cops can make him quit, issue citations, or even seize equipment. If a ham is bleeding into the same TV, the matter must be referred directly to FCC; local cops have no authority over an Amateur station.

It only "implies" training. It is hoped that, by reading and even memorizing those questions, SOME of it will sink in. Also, other hams have the responsibility to assist the new ham in achieving knowledge about his hobby. Training in many subjects is made available to hams thru ARRL, local clubs, and just plain old experience. Unfortunately, for a few hams, it doesn't sink in. They usually get theirs sooner or later (www.rainreport.com).

I like that idea. The problem, of course, is what is "interference". If you decide that you want to set up a kilowatt station on your local 500 watt am station when it has gone off the air after sunset and decide that it is interfering with you when it comes back on the air at sunrise, you will be in for a surprise - and a visit, assuming you don't vacate ASAP! Unlicensed stations (even those commercial low power security systems) must not interfere with licensed stations and must put up with interference from licensed stations. No, any freebanders straying into 10 meters may well expect a couple of KW stations to jump on 'em with RTTY and there is nothing they can do. Yes, just call the FCC and tell 'em all about it. I'm sure they would be REAL interested in the story.

Yes, you can get them pretty cheap, but I think so only if you're lucky. I have a 17 amp size I bought for 15 bucks because I think the guy didn't realize what he had. At auction, I've seen them go for at least $150-200 used. I think $30-60 would be a fair price for yours, since it was hardly used.

Just my two cents.....

Well now, I didn't say it was wasted space. There are quite a few commercial allocations in there, and the government uses it for both the forest service and the military. The difference is that most of the legitimate services use FM, which is usually unaffected by low-level AM and SSB. And many of them use CTCSS, which cuts down on most of the FM crosstalk. But they still get interference from these freebanders, regardless of mode, because of their use of power greater than that allowed for CB.

You hit upon the key concept here: 'communication'. Ever been to a keydown? They are not about communication. Basically, it's when a handful of those 'resentful' CBers, as you describe above, get together and make a competition out of "deadkeying, playing music, harassment, and generally trying to become noticed by making a jerk out of himself".

Reinstituting the license requirement wouldn't be a cure-all, but it sure wouldn't hurt.

Jerry, I don't think this town can enact an ordinance with penalties that differ from the FCC. So being put into jail for 180 days I think that someone will challenge this ordinance as being invalid. Reread the original ffc law that gave towns this power and read it word for word. Somehow I think this ordinance is a little excessive.

One other small advantage. Front to back ratio. Not much, but some.

So the option of Omni, stearable directionality, and some front-to-back.
All in a package requiring no rotor and being mechanically strong and simple. But, the relay boxes and relay control is a little cheesey and weak.

Not quite. Some antennas are prone to electrostatic interference while others are not. Loop antennas are best for eliminating this type of noise, but not very practical for mobile CB. If, and I reiterate 'IF', that's the problem, then it can be solved simply by adding an RF choke from the antenna input to ground.

When i lved in Winter Park,Fl. as a young boy their was a gentleman who lived down the street with huge towering antennas looming over his house,his handle was "lightning rod control" and for good reason.
I don't recall how much power he was pushing or what kind of power supply he had but he had the power company run 3-phase to him and the lights at our house would dim when he keyed down and TV and radio were wiped clean off the air.....kinda scary actually cause
i was too young to understand what was happening.
All i could envision was a labaratory similar to something out of a Frankenstein movie.....

THIS IS LIGHTNING ROD CONTROL AND WE WILL BE USING THIS FREQUENCY,THANX FOR

Then you are classifying the 10 meter band as everything from 10.00 to 10.999999 meters, and 11 meters is from 11.00 meters (27.275 MHz) to 11.999999 meters (25 MHz)? That would mean there are 13 CB channels that are actually in the 10 meter band, and the 'freeband' is not part of 11 meters but wholly within 10 meters. It would also mean that hams are allowed to use their ham equipment on part of the CB. And what about the other bands where the band designator is in the center of the band?

You are kinda mixed up there, Mr. Dog. Maybe you should read my post about how the FCC has already defined the lines. The term '10 meter band' is just a designator for the ham band that is defined as being between 28.000 and 29.700 MHz. The designator is not meant to be mathematically precise -- it's just a label.

How about that. It appears that hams can operate on illegal frequencies and with illegal power - and be exempt from the city ordinance.

The city and FCC may think that is OK - but the courts will rule that it is discriminatory. They need to remove the Amateur Radio exclusion.
There is no reason for having it.

I met with N8WWM, He was man enough to come to my table, We shook hands and decided to settle our differences. and he basically explained to me what the key clowns were all about. I can understand the keyclowns point. I don't totally agree with it all. But I can understand why thier doing that their trying to do... However, I won't be turning in people to thier ISP's and such. However, I want to be the one to try and educate people in the myths of CB. and lies alot of these Amp builders and sellers try to con people into believing.

I also had the pleasure in meeting Leeland Scott and the dude from REACT. KC8TCQ (I think???) and one hippy looking dude, who says he never posts...

No, N8WWM never beat me up, in fact, He offered me a Coke at his trailer at the Hamfest. It was very tasty, seeing how HOT it was outside. Me, Leland, Doug, KC8TCQ and the hippy dude all enjoyed a good coversation out behind the building where my table was...

leland, i'm confused. what do you mean with any luck they will stop by and give us the bussiness? are you implying you wish harm and hate against me or my family for no other reason than disagreeing with you here on this newsgroup over purely radio related matters??? your a very mean spirited person and its eay to see your hatefull ways extnd way beyond those feelings you have towards cb'ers

i go from being part of family bussiness all the way down to being a minumum wage recieving store clerk? you seem confused. perhaps you need more of twistedheds guidance in this matter? he usually steers you in the correct direction anyways. but your insinuation that it is truely worth one of the employees time which goes way beyond a hourly pay rate in a small company to sit 8 hours just in order to testify against somebody writing a check for less than 200 bucks is rediculous simply for the fact the criminal and civil aspects of this case would be totally different matters requiring two seperate court dates. the civil case is the only one actually important enough to even warrant some concern for but its been a proven fact time and time again that the same people passing hot checks are the same ones that will ignore a judges order so really its all in vain for somebody like myself but on the other hand somebody like you who enjoys inflicting hate, pain, and physical losses on those who you dont like it might just be a one day holiday. it would be your only real chance in life "to get the bad guy" and make you feel like a hero.

leland, these are things you just wish were true. instead i'm telling you how it is done and has been done for the last 23 years of our small familiy bussiness (well theres actually three but thats no matter here). dont be so angry that were not all like you. not all of us get a hard on everytime we get to report another person.

I was glad to meet everyone at the swap today. It's nice to attach some faces to the names on the news group. Yeah, you're right it was a nice smoke break outside of the barn. And yes N8 did settle his dispute "in person", and I can vouch for that since I personally witnessed it. I don't know if I'll be at the Adrian swap. Depends if I'm in town that weekend or not.

They also make LMR-400-DB. That is the direct burial coax. It's flood filled with a silicon compound to keep moisture out when the cable is used underground. No conduit, pipe etc. required. The Belden 9913 coax cable you can't use like that even though it has nearly the same losses per 100 feet. For some out there that may be just the thing they need instead of the low loss you get with the cable as well.

Yes. The matter must be referred to FCC. I'm sure that some local LEOS

An MRF 477 and a 2SC1969 and such are TO-220 cases. They are about 1cm x 1cm x .5cm with the three legs pointing down. A 3 pin voltage regulator on the side of the case (green 2SAxxxx) is a TO-220. An MRF455 is the small size round pill. An MRF454 or 2SC2290 or 2SC2879 are the larger round pills. Hope this helps. Stay dry!

X-Force would be the choice for sure.
Let me Explain why...
X-Force/MagnaForce Amps transmit right on frequency, which means most of your power is being transmitted on one channel.
As with Texas Star You have alot of harmonics being generated by the Amp, which may look very good on an inexpensive meter, but in reality only some portion of the signal is going on the right channel.

My suggestion would be MagnaForce since they have class B Biasing.

Expect many lawsuits in the months to come over these ordinances. In many cases, removal of the ham exemption will be the likely result.

Pity then on the poor hams who worked so hard to get these laws enacted. Not

The gain factor on this antenna was grossly overstated, in my opinion. If I remember correctly, Antenna Specialists rated the Super Scanner at 5.75db omni and 8.75 db in phasing mode.

By comparison, the Hy-Gain Super Penetrator was rated at 5.10db gain. In the opinion of many (including myself) this was the greatest omnidirectional CB antenna ever manufactured. A Super Penetrator could EASILY outperform a Super Scanner in omni mode. I know. I had both.

As far as beams are concerned, the standard 3-element vertical beam (manufactured by Hy-Gain, Archer, and others) was rated at 9db gain. The actual forward gain on these "real" beams was much greater than a Super Scanner in phasing mode, despite having a stated advantage of only .25db. For rejection, there's no comparison. You could drive a Mack truck through the back/side door of the Super Scanner.

After careful testing and comparison, I junked the Super Scanner in favor of a Super Penetrator & Avanti PDL II combination. The PDL II was compact enough to be mounted on a standard TV antenna mast and turned easily with an Alliance "Tenna-Rotor" TV antenna rotator. Gain, rejection, and overall performance were all superior to the Super Scanner. Plus, I had the added benefits of two antennas and horizontal polarity when in beam mode. This combination served me well for many years.

No they can't operate illegally and get away with it. It is just handled differently.

> The city and FCC may think that is OK - but the courts will rule that

> There is no reason for having it.

Nope. It is just handled differently. ALL licensed services are exempt from local action.
Problems with such stations must be referred to FCC for enforcement. This Public Law is targeted at the area where citizens have the most problems with interference from BIG "leenyars", and operating out of band; the CB Radio. This is, truly, where most of the trouble comes from.
Yes, hams, too, sometimes have trouble with bleedover, but the record speaks for itself in most cases. The movement for this kind of ordinance got started in Beloit, WI, and in Michigan where people were being pounded by interference from overpowered CB radios.

You see, the "discrimination" falls on its face before it even gets on its feet. CB Radio is not, by law, now or ever was, a hobby. While it is not being enforced, the rules regarding CB stated that it was to be used for local, family, and even business. We both know that this is not being followed, and CB radio has become something, for the most part, that was never intended. It is NOT supposed to be a competing hobby with Amateur Radio.
They fall under different rules. So, since it is not, in a large part, being used as intended (by law), then any challenge to the Public Law is invalid, and the argument can be made that such a Law was needed---even though many of us are opposed to it.

Hm. I'm not so sure of that. Obviously, it has not been tested in the courts - as the ability for local enforcement is relatively new.

It could be argued that a Ham operating out of band is not operating as a ham, but as a bootlegger. If so, then the local ordinances would cover him/her just as much as a CBer.

If Hams were immune, then the antenna preemption would be absolute, not limited.

Tim,

This ham has been opposed to the local enforcement thing from day one. Yes, some hams would pursue this with great glee. I think it is a bad thing--and we have already discussed the reasons why. This time I agree with you.

Unfortunately, more and more cities, counties, and even States are going to find out about this Public Law, and pass their own statutes. Eventually, some innocent CBer or ham will be in court defending himself against a mistaken citation.

The result of which will be harassment and legal bills for legal, licensed amateur operators, attempting to "clear their name." Anyone with a "big antenna" on their house or car is now a potential target for "revenue enhancement" from local LEOs. Fines = $$$$$ for municipal governments.

Those of you in the ham community who believe this law is the greatest thing since digital readouts, mark my words: it WILL come back to bite you in the ass.

Maybe by this ordinance. But that is not true for ALL local laws that affect radio communications. Otherwise, there would be a complete antenna

Expect many lawsuits in the months to come over these ordinances. In many > cases, removal of the ham exemption will be the likely result.

While I am opposed to local enforcement in its entirety, I doubt such lawsuits will be successful.
The two services are governed by different laws. By law, the two services have completely different purposes: CB, a land mobile service to be used as personal, local,
and business communications, Amateur Radio for experimentation, public service, and hobby activities. We know that CB isn't used that way, but..... SO, using the argument that CB is badly abused, Amateur Radio is governed by different rules, and is licensed like the other services that are protected by this law, any attempt to regulate Amateur Radio locally will fail.

I know that grates on some peoples' nerves, but I have a gut feeling that things will remain the way it is--unless there is somehow a restoration of lots of money to FCC to do the job they should be doing.

BTW, hams had nothing to do with the anactment of this Federal Law---you can blame the Congressional Reps from Wisconsin (Feingold) and Michigan (Ehlers) for this. No doubt, some hams encouraged it after its passing, but this one is "agin" local enforcement.

I agree with most of this rant, Jerry...except this.

>CB Radio is not, by law, now or ever was, a hobby.

The FCC did actually lift the ban on "hobby" comms on the CB back in the late 70's. Very easy to miss it as it was done with little fanfare, but I have the article announcing it. I'll be happy to "snail-mail" you a copy.

>It is NOT supposed to be a competing hobby with Amateur Radio.

...and it isn't. This line of thought is born of ignorance and insecurity.

Actually Leland I didn't think it was funny at all.
I pity someone that has the logic that you are displaying.
Just can't wait when you flick the cigarette onto the sidewalk and get thrown in jail for 15 years, same logic right? Or get caught for the second time and put to death.
Yes, that is great logic, if you want to move to China,

Arab countries, have at it, but don't try to justify your crazy logic here.

I have said that all along. Unfortunately (or fortunately depending on the situation), cops are taught to "get control of the situation as quickly as possible", and often will not listen when you attempt to explain that you have a license. OR they aren't going to appreciate being told that they have no jurisdiction; after all, "ah'm th' law 'roun' h'yar, yuh hear me, boy!" Cops aren't stupid (for the most part), but they aren't trained to know what kinds of radios are legal or other electronic issues.

The Amateur exemption is in the Federal statute. As to antennas, there is a Bill in Congress right now to annull bans against Amateur antennas in CC & R's. When will the CBers sue over that issue for "discrimination"? The existing limited exemption states that local gov's must make 'reasonable' accommodations for Amateur antennas (zoning laws) that allows for sufficient communications and meets local needs. IOW, they can't arbitrarily restrict a ham to a support structure (tower) of "10 feet over the roof" and the ham's house in at the bottom of a large hill., or prevent him from having a tower at all. State legislatures are gradually codifying PRB-1 into their own laws.

Interesting question. Out of band, the amateur is not operating under part 97 and should no longer be exempt from the laws. It will get tacky; what if a freebander is up in 10 meters? Granted they are still unlicensed, but would the locals even check if the transmissions were above 28.000? I think it boils down to a similar situation we have with the disabled parking spots. A few folks abused the spots and then laws were passed. Now, a lot of folks park in those spots and when you see a young couple (in their 20s) jump out of the car they just parked in a disabled parking spot (oh, but they have the permit hanging from the rear view mirror), one has to be suspicious. So now they've passed a new law and the disability stickers will have an expiration date (punched out, similar to our inspection stickers) and the store security as well as local police will be watching. If things are held down to a dull roar, nothing much happens. When a ton of folks start abusing a situation, a lot of innocents have to suffer.

Tim, 73 is used on the machines. A lot of stuff happens on the machines. One guy was so adament about the necessity of Morse that I obliged the guy with about 40 WPM over the machine! It helps, of course, when the repeater owner is on and he is more then willing to accomodate us all!

Hello Jon, first off the wiring to the radio is as follows the shielded wire the one inside the shield goes to pin one (1) the shield goes to pin two (2) now we are at a little problem if the mike is stock then the red wire should go to pin three(3) and the black will go to pin four (4) that is if everything is stock let me know if that works or not .

I don't think it's crazy at all. Harsh punishment is considered a deterrent. Of course even the most severe punishments won't deter the more desperate or determined criminals, but it does cut down on the casual abuse. All in all, I found cities in the Middle East pretty safe, even for an American. Certainly safer than Pittsburgh, Chicago or LA.

But nowdays, even capital punishment isn't much of a deterrent because many criminals hold such little regard for life. Pretty scary.

Sorry, I operate legally. But I'll counter your challenge: I'm getting my license this fall; you get yours and we'll stir the pot on HF.

But again you missed the point: Just because he doesn't have HF doesn't mean he can't code. At least he has a license, which is two steps above your operational status, Timmy.

If the ham is out of band and using his call, then he is operating as a ham.

If the ham is operating out of band using his ham call he is still subject to part 97.

Yeah but think about what Leland said "shoot illegal Cb'rs in the head, just like the terrorist" For operating an illegal cb, he was classifying it the same as what happened on 9-11-2001, that's extremism.

Well I have never been to the middle east, but my parents have extensively. They would agree with you to a point,
I remember they loved Egypt, Israel, United Arab Emirates.
Morocco was another story, while beautiful in most ways, they said there was an un-easy feeling. They always felt as the infidels, no matter who they were dealing with. Also they were warned not to venture anywhere away from the main venues, something they already knew.

Also I found Amsterdam to be more safe than the cites you mentioned, they do all the things your not supposed to do in the middle-east.

Agreed, but a lot has to do with how they are probably brought up. Look at the two kids that beat their father to death, pretty sad.

Now JJ, something's you post are pretty good, but this constant bashing of Cb'rs make you sound like Dave.
He's always calling people communist, you keep calling anyone that posts drivel from anon accounts as "illegal operating cber". If you haven't realized it yet, both sides are playing the game, some for and some against, so it isn't to far fetched that some are stirring the pot purposely.

If you are implying that people, who
hold ham licenses, should be somehow
held to a higher moral standard than
the "common man", then that would
be faulty logic. A ham license is only
a "permit" to use radio, it is not a
"badge of morality".

Dim Dweebo,
You should look in the mirror. You are a walking smut pile yourself. Don't even be trying to tell anyone else how to live while you are the High School droput, mommy and daddy turned their back on, dope and booze saturated, ignorant, degenerate, ugly ass pink muffin boy that you are.
You make comments like if you were near N8 you would be "pimpin hoes on his front sidewalk". What kinda asshole is a pimp in the 1st place? Only a socially retarded shithunk takes pleasure in that sorta activity, and civilized society regards pimps as vermin. Rightly so, too. We should have expected as much that yer big ambition is to be a pimp. Fits you to a T.

You know your REAL place in life, Dim Dweebo the fairy boy. That's why you attack N8 and the anti's. You desperately need an identity, so you hang with other criminal individuals to attempt to find one. You know your REAL place is with the other dopeheads, dropouts, criminals and losers. You will never rise above the level you currently enjoy. Likely that you will spend a good portion of your life in jails of one kind or other.

You are a JOINER, DweebFag. A JOINER. You couldn't lead yoursef to take a piss with a bursting bladder. Look at your associations, they prove my words. A failure, a druggie, a JOINER. Master of nothing, manipulated by anyone who knows your buttons. A JOINER.

No go cry and whine some more about how BAAAAAD you are. Let's see some more pics of you with guns and dope and booze. IMMMMPRESSSSIVE, Dweebfag, IMMPRESSIVE. A legend in your own chemically augmented cerebrospinal fluid.

1199. Truckstop Radios

EEI may not be the greatest but they have had an effect on truckstops. Now most if not all truck stops carry Galaxy radios in adition to the Cobra junk. Many also carry Rangers and Superstars also. Sure compared to fancy Ham gear it ain't great but compared to stock cobras they offer allot to a trucker. I think the availability of 10 meter radios has forced truckstops to also offer these great radios.
So far if there is any "crackdown" it must be from the MIB. Heck big radios are gonna make yahoo auctions surpase ebay in a few years:)

But only if the FCC would actively enforce it. Which I doubt they'd do. Of course, reinstating the license requirement isn't going to happen either.

Ok, here's what I know on the subject. First off, an MRF 477 is based BEC, with the emitter lead grounded to the case, which allows you to mount it directly to the heatsink without an insulator. When changing to a 2SC 1969, which is based BCE, you will have to swap the collector and emitter leads, and insulate the case from the heatsink.

Once the mounting problems are solved, you should be fine. Yes, the 1969 is a lower power device (25W vs. 45W), so you will get less out. I've never done this replacement myself so I don't have hard data to compare to.

I once did an MRF 455 conversion in a President Jackson. It was quite an undertaking from a mounting standpoint. But once I managed to get the device properly mounted with a good heatsink, the performance was not too bad, and the 455 device is a bit "beefier" than the 477, and can stand up to more abuse. Power output fell from 45 watts on SSB (with the 477) to about 37 with the 455.

The main reason why I did the conversion was that the person who owned the radio was constantly blowing the final. I don't know what he was doing to it, it was biased fine, and tuned correctly. Once I made the change, he never blew the final again.

that.
If that makes me a politically incorrect hate mongrel who fosters ill resorting to something that ought to be kept in the closet at home.

That's mainly why I poofed him.

Antiboys' short %100 accurate, devastating reply:

As far as politically incorrect goes...the inter species breeding that

Now get on back to the truckstop and take FUGGLY with ya. We are are defeated at every turn. Going on 2 years now and your best efforts have been for naught. It rankles you, twithed. Ooooh how it bugs you.

Your best efforts at snitching out to ISP's, anonymous posts, aliases, etc.: All down in the bright flames of futility. Much like your overall existence. This has been a 2 year long emotional Pearl Harbor on you keyclowns, and especially you. You are the one who considers himself so smart, and so above the average keyclown. You are not. You are the same type of social mutant as the rest, the only difference being a bigger mouth. This is good, because it shows the world what an idiot you are. Your jihad failed. It failed again and again. It will continue to do so.

Your bitches, which is a very appropriate word considering that they come from a BITCH, are nothing but hypocrisy from an inferior human being who cannot grasp his inferiority. Man it must suck to be an idiot and have no clue you are one. Your emotional health is buckling, and it shows.

Maybe not, but a 2 meter rig might. I used to cause my CD player to eject disks as soon as I ran more than about 100 watts on 2 meters. Of course most of the reason for that was that I was running a poorly decoupled antenna at the time (A discone). Once I put up a "real" antenna, the problem stopped.

You I won't call a drug addict, Landcarp. I will call you what we all know you to be. A criminal. I told you buttheads a long time ago that all ya had to do was come over. Not one of you have the guts. Hence you are also labelled a sissy. Making threats and not carrying them out when challenged is the mark of a sissy. Any arguements there, Markie Beckie?

As far as complaints to my ISP go, you are REALLY showing how stupid you are when you post that contact info, since uunet is a backbone.

You are a traumatized, ineffective little dweeb, sharkieboy.

As for Chuck...He isnt a full fledged AKC by a long shot. In any case, that situation is none of your business.

If you were in the midwest, and not a sissified coward, you could have met me too. Not that I would especially care to meet such an admitted bad citizen.

Told you jerkoffs long time ago. I have ALL the hospitality you could ever need, in any form necessary. You just can't comprehend that there is nothing you can do to stop the Anti-boys. You think you are some omnipotent being? In reality you are just a legend in your own mind.

One last thing, Markie Beckie...If you had any proof of any kind about any dirt of the magnitude you are accusing me of I would not be posting this right now. All you do is grasp at straws in the useless attempt to stop the AKC. It won't happen, and you are doomed to keep making the attempts, much to the glee of the AKC.

I hear week 2 of twithed's vacation journal tells all about you. I can't wait to read it.

Keyclowns:

You see it happening, the slow but inevitible reclaiming of rights by the citizens who do not recognize your right to be a criminal. The party is not over, but the lights are slowly dimming.

Hell, I may just petition City Council here myself. I know enough local AKC'ers that would wanna go in with me.

And you are correct. I had similar experiences. A friend took down a perfectly good super magnum (An A/S 1/2 wave GP), and put up a super scanner 10 feet higher. His signal on my end used to be about +25db over S9 with the GP, and it was about +22 over with the SS in Omni mode, and about +26db over in directional mode. In short, it was worse than the omni in omni mode, and slightly better than an omni (Considering the extra 10' in height, it might be a wash) in directional mode.

What is it they say about compromises? They can't do any one thing as good as a single purpose device. The super scanner sucked as an omni, and it sucked as a beam. The front to back ratio was poor, (We could only drop a signal from S9 to about S6) The gain was poor. And if you were not careful, you could fry it if you put more than 50 watts into it in omni mode (On the later models that eliminated the coax "stub"), or switched the relays while keyed with high power applied.

I think eventually as more cities and towns become aware of this, more will get on the bandwagon, and the more likely some innocent CBer will be mistakenly blamed for "interference".
73
Jerry
Or some hammie may be found to be the culprit, as most actions of jamming and deliberate interferences, according to FCC enforcement, are done by hammies.
When a hammie gets popped (and one will be, rest assured) for an interference complaint, and such is deemed intentional by a local court, it will probably be precedent-setting as I predict the hammie will then face a double whammie, penalization by both the local AND government types. The government will set precedent in this type case (intentional interference) by, in essence, saying, "Look, you, as a licensed amateur KNEW better,,,,in this manner you are NOT be absolved". Federal courts can and have overridden lower courts in the past.
  If it's done correctly (and it will be, the feds love examples) the charges will be so constructed as to avoid any impropriety or image of double jeopardy. But hey, what do I know? I'm just a dumb cber.

Sure...it's what everyone named (Lelnad, N8, Dave Hall) in your email attempts to do cause strife.

>That's when everyone agrees on the locations of these 'lines' so nobody is causing anyone else any grief. By some strange coincidence, it just so happens that the FCC has already drawn up some lines that most people can live with! And to remove any doubt as to the locations of these lines, they have written them up as laws. Of course there are going to be some malcontents, misfits, and just plain lazy people that will consider themselves to be above the law and draw their own lines. Kinda scary when you think about it -- people that view federal laws as mere 'suggestions'. If people start thinking that they have some sort of right to set standards in contradiction to the law -- i.e, draw their own lines -- where will it stop? And what moral right can one claim when they say it's ok to operate illegally but not 'too illegally'? How illegal do you have to be before it's considered wrong?

One time soon, I'm going to try it. I think I'd rather lose some power with the c1969 as opposed to possibly heavily modifying the chassis to accept the 455. I can always boost the output power in other ways if needed anyway. I was still wondering about the LC output circuits and whether or not they would have to be changed since the power output would change. Probably not since the difference really isn't a large one.

This is what he is talking about. Lancaster Ohio has just about outlawed 11 meter CB sets. This is the story from A R Newsline I found on the newgroup.

RADIO LAW: LANCASTER OHIO HAS NEW CB CONTROL LAW

Lancaster Ohio now has a new City Ordinance to put teeth into local enforcement of the FCC’s Part 95 CB radio rules. The measure was passed on August 26th and is the handi-work of Lancaster City Law Director David Trimmer and a local area radio amateur named John Hilliard, W8OF. The two put the legislation together over the last several months and sent it twice to the FCC office in Farmington Hills, Michigan for review and comments.

Under the law, CB radio users who operate on what’s termed as an unlawful frequency or using excessively powerful equipment could be cited for a misdemeanor, with a maximum penalty of 180 days in jail and a $1,000 fine. Ham radio operators are exempted because the city says that they are trained, licensed, are regulated differently under federal law.

City officials estimate there are at least 250 people operating 11 meter Class D CB radios in Lancaster and not all follow FCC rules. The city's law will give prosecutors a tool to fight these abuses. The FCC believes that Lancaster is the first municipality to enact such a far-reaching ordinance to regulate CB radio within the city limits. (ARNewsline™ from information supplied by W8OF)

Sparky@cet.com lusted after the DX we achieve on the freeband with:
The spread between 27.410 and 28.000 is actually a 'buffer zone'. <

We had a pleasant conversation concerning this approxmately a year or so ago.
First of all, there is no "spread", according to your past posts. YOU claimed that the frequencies there were all assigned and in use. You even made the claim that you were going to contact certain entities that were assigned to the freqs and come back here and post them. You never responded concerning that topic again (I figured you contacted some of them (Like the US Forest Service) and found out I was correct all along when I told you they were largely abandoned for more technological advances in communication.
Now here you are claiming the exact opposite..that it is a "buffer" zone.

>It's there to keep the splatter from each band interfering with the other. So it has a purpose, and that purpose is not as an 'overflow zone' for disgruntled CBers and ham wannabees.

Freebanders usually want nothing to do with hammies except to hang out with some of the better ones on the freeband. The term "ham wannabes" obviously is interpreted as derogatory by you and denotes the malice in your posts, as you directed it toward anyone who isn't presently licensed. You claim that you are present to assist the "fence-sitters" (IE: Cbers who are on the verge of legality) make up their mind. Cb is where many begin their quest to become hammies. Now these fine people see the same person who claimed to champion such things as the lying, malice filled individual he is, by insulting them prior to them even getting started.
I do like your misapplied usage of the word "disgruntled". How far back in google did you go to learn of it?

>But illegal operators usually gravitate toward a band that needs only cheap and readily available equipment which is easy to operate with only a second-grade education.

Agreed. The license is dirtcheap and just look at what the nocodes did to 2 meter, 75, etc....

>The FCC made the CB a 'plug-n-play' band, <

The hammies made their own bed and want others to lay in it. The odiferous aroma of hypocrisy has always alerted us to your presence, present masks included.
The hammies made 2 meter a sewer pit.

>which is very attractive to the person with too much money, too few brains, and little or no civil responsibility.<<

You just said it was cheap and attracted poor second grade-educated types such as yourself, now you insert another self-contradiction and claim it's the folks with TOO much money. The fact is you just don;t know much....period.

>Since there are so many people that fit that description, it's just natural that the CB will be crowded with both potential and practicing pirates.

It's just "NATURAL" that cb will be crowded (forget the reasoning) because people fit the description of having too much money? Fraaaank, you need to get lucid. And a job.

>And as a matter of course, those unlicensed operators are going to spill over the edges of the band.<

How can an unlicensed barefoot DX talking SOB interfere with hammies when he is on 555 using the same equipment as the hammies?
How about those sevices that are/aren't (you really haven't made up your mind as to whether they are there or not) in your "buffer" zone?
Answer: You're slinging more disinfo,,,more horseshit, more Frank-opinionated BS that gets you upset when you fail at "teaching" anyone else your screwed up ways...LOL!

>How far they extend themselves is really up to the FCC, <<

Since when? How does the FCC dictate that? They can't even dictate WHO talks...let alone where. Look at Lelnad...he has claimed to have been the victim of many cbers and freebanders pirating his call. I personally have heard his call and know damn good and well it wasn't him.......and when I did hear him on the freeband, he wouldn't even talk let alone give a name or number, just tried to throw some weak ass carrier with noise and got buried instantly by real radios. I don't talk on hammie bands for several reasons, but I assure you, fear of the FCC is not even remotely considered one of them, despite what you would like some to believe.

>but the larger the 'freeband' becomes, the more intense will be the activity, and the harder it will be for the FCC to control.

(Chuckle) This terrifies you, doesn't it? My God, we're taking over and didn't even realize it (chuckle).....

>Personally,<

Coming from you Frank, it;s ALWAYS been personal. You were never taught proper communication technique.

>I think the FCC lost control when they removed the license requirement for CB radio. They should bring it back.<

It wouldn't matter. Look at Keith's gun analogy.....throwing money and more legislation at a problem has always been a knee-jerk liberal response that has failed because it was never a well thought out reply, something that has haunted you forever.

Oh man, all you got to do is listen to the news each night. Like skull of another with a hammer over a dispute about a video game.

Where are the parents? and why don't they teach these kids some wouldn't accomplish a thing. Besides, it's the wrong newsgroup.

Some of that "fancy Ham gear" ain't that great, either. If all you want to do is talk on the radio, it shouldn't cost your more than $5 for a garage-sale special, $10 for some coax, and $20 for a whip and mount. So for $35 bucks you can be on the air and sounding just as loud as any other legal rig. But if you want to be the big-shot at the truck stop, or step on everyone's signal for a radius of a mile or more, then I guess it's all about how much you can afford.

> but compared to stock cobras they offer allot to a >trucker. I think the availability of 10 meter radios has forced truckstops >to also offer these great radios.

Depends on your definition of "great". If you want a ham radio, get a license and then get a ham radio. If you want a very reliable and rugged CB radio, it's hard to beat those old Johnsons, and the early Unidens and Pearce-Simpsons are also hard to kill. If you want good Rx audio, plug in an external speaker. If you want good Tx audio, buy a good mic. This is easy stuff. After all, it's a plug-n-play band, so how complicated can it be?

Just get on the air with any old radio, and then start working on the reason you got the radio in the first place -- communication. And if you are getting a signal out of your antenna but nobody seems to be responding, try working on your communication skills instead of buying new gear.

I doubt it. In case you haven't noticed, since 9-11 people have become a little bit more civic-minded and respectful of the laws. I think as time goes by you are going to see more and more opposition to flagrant law-breaking activities such as freebanding and CB amp competitions (and other violations, I'm sure).

Have you ever had the sudden intense urge to perform the vulcan mind meld with Howard Stern's penis?

By the way, that was an actual question asked by a caller on Larry King Live of H. Ross Perot in 1992.

The reason why I asked is that we all know how Stern squwaks constantly about his teenie weenie, so since yer mind is even smaller...maybe a mind meld would help you both.

EEI is gonna have an even bigger fall this time. Data is being amassed, transactions are being made, investigations are being done. You will see. 7 grand is way to little of a fine...We gonna see some real money this time, along with some get acquainted sessions with Flippo...Watch.

I think $150 is high for a 2950...so offer him it and explain about the mic. If he knows it works tell him to get a mic for it and then you can buy it when you see it working. 2950 are a good radio but they do have some flaws. One is Shake Rattle and Roll, they don't hold up under rough conditions. Otherwise, awesome radio with tons of channels. If he finds a mic and you can get a radio check and maybe a SSB radio check to insure it functions $175 isnt bad but still overpriced.....but hey, you cant take it with you..so spend it! My 2 cents...333 Springfield MO

I would stay far away from these mass produced copper electronics amps. The builders are just a bunch of copy cats. I had to buy three of them before I realized that they were a rip off. I had problems with one of them staying keyed up and the builders kept telling me it was my radio. I changed to 3 different radios and still did it. I finnaly had a guy look at the amp and he told me that they left some 10 ohm resistors or something out of the box. Beware

> the law to exclude hammys and take down CB.

Not exactly. The impetus for the bill came from the constituents of Reps.
Feingold and Ehlers whose TVs and stereos were being swamped by illegal CB activity.
Feingold and Ehlers first contacted FCC individually and got pretty much ignored. This ticked them off, and they went to work on separate bills to abate the interference.
Eventually, they got together,
ARRL got wind of the bill, and contacted them to get them to place exemptions for ham radio in the wording. As to actually crafting the bill, I don't think ARRL had THAT much to do with it other than the exemption. I could be wrong, but that was the impression I got when reading the Bill and ARRL's reports on the matter.

Incidentally, there is a bill moving thru Congress right now to exempt licensed hams from CC & R restrictions due to the events of 9/11 and ham radio's contribution to emergency comms. ARRL originally tried to get FCC to make this part of PRB-1. They refused. So ARRL found a sponsor
in Congress to get it codified into Federal law.

I'm dropping the dime on everyone in here, dealers, peoples, everyone... becuase if I got down, so will everyone else... So, think about that there Mr. Hambone... you're kind makes me sick, think cause you got a friggin ham ticket, you are the F.C.C.'s enforcement Division, and to be quite frank with you, the FCC thinks the Hambones are a bigger JOKE than the CB'ers! Why do you think they sell off the hams bands every other week?

That's just you Dweebo. You do that as your way to "lash out" at the anti-boys. You do it because you know there is absolutely nothing else you can do.

(attachment 4):

Question: What is Chuck's 2 Way Radio
Answer: Chuck's 2 Way Radio is a SMALL Side business ran by Charles Adkins, N8QXP, a 25 year old, Ham Radio Operator, and Computer Nut. (Not mention Internet freak!)

Qnestion: Well, What do you carry?
Answer: Well, Where do I start? CB's, and Acc's, Antenna's, Car Stereo's and Acc's, Radar Detector's, and a lot of other things too numerous to list here.

Question: How do I get ahold of you?

Answer: The fastest way to reach me is via E-Mail, My E-mail Address is MailTo:Chuck@Chucks2way.com My Web site address is Http://www.chucks2way.com or if you don't wanna send me e-mail, you call me at 1-313-389-7189 and leave a voicemail message 24 hours a day 7 days a week, 365 days a year. and sometimes you might just catch me in the office!

Question: Do you take Master Card, Visa, Or other types of Credit Cards?
Answer: I'd love to, But the cost of getting into Credit Cards is quite expensive, from what I'm told, it costs $500.00 for the software! and $100.00 or more a month just for the service! and PLUS I'd have to mark up all my products 7% just to cover the transaction fee! No Thanks, I'll stick to checks and money orders!

Question: Do you ship COD ?
ANSWER: No, I cannot ship COD for the cost of doing that is too great. and I don't feel like losing my pants either! ;-)

Question: Well, What are you're Terms?
ANSWER: Cash, Baby, Cash! No, Seriously. I accept Checks, and/or Money Orders.

QUESTION: If I order something, How long does it take to get it and How do you ship?
ANSWER: First off, It usually takes about a week and a half to get something from me, reasons why? Well, First I have to recieve the check or money order for the order, then if the check is from a out of state bank, it usually takes 5 Business days for the Money order or Check to Clear the Bank, Then I have to order the product from my sources, The the product has to arrive here, Then I visually inspect the product for Any and all damages, then, I Bench test the product to be sure it isn't going to blow up, then I Pack the product back up and Ship it to you via UPS Ground... I never charge the costomer Shipping, I pay it myself... and that usally takes about 3 days to arrive. I do this with ALL orders that come through here.

QUESTION: Do you accept orders from resellers or Dealers?
Answer: Whatever you do with this product after you get it from me is your business! I don't care, Although, I will make it clear, I charge the SAME prices to dealers, as I do end users.

QUESTION: Do you sell those 25-29 Mhz Amps? (or CB radio Amps)
ANSWER: Yes! But! There is no warranty on this kind of equipment at all. and there are no returns on this sort of equipment at all. ALL SALES FINAL!

He cant even TALK rationally back about it cuz he is a dope and booze soaked NWA wanna be, a high school dropout who was kicked out by his parents when they realized he was a hopeless drag and a parasite on society. His greatest fantasy is to "pimp hoes". This is logical since it involves trodding on other people in a quest for personal enrichment without deserving it. Dweebo's whole mentality shows that that is what he is about.

just TRY TO!
You are stuck like an old record. Look keyclown, I like blues, you like gay party music...I don't care...enjoy. Just get this: No matter what you do, no matter how much you whine, no matter how much you cry like the pathetic "3rd world-american" you are, you will never budge

the AKC.

We know it is your secret dream. We know that your diseased pus bag of a brain FANTASIZES about it!

A question arises: I heard something interesting about you...Is it true that when the keyclwons come to visit you that you organize gay sex toy parties? You know, on the order of those Mary Kay parties women do?

Markie Beckie, pathetic loser. Still, to show the AKC's compassion for the retarded, here's a door prize: One of twithed's filthy jock straps! it was snitched from Ozark333's trailer during twithed's recent vacation.

A $400.00 value, yours free for playing in the AntiKeyclowns own the NG game!

Keyclown boys...sigh...hehehehe!

The good base station will be at least $250. A good antenna is better then linear lips in the house. 4 watts will annoy your neighbors enough.

It doesn't matter. When I get to a post from an asshole, I sort by sender, mark them all read, then sort by thread an continue.

There was 150 messages when I started. The QRM started dying

Love em, put a Astatic 636L noise-cancelling mic. on and you wont find a cleaner sounding rig (bar none).
Mount it securely (as you would any radio) cause the 2950 has a cpu that thinks it's a Martini, it likes to be stirred not shaken. A modified 2950 will cover the gap between 26.--32. Mhz but requires realignment.
Read the mods book, here is a link to it--------

Galaxy DX 2547. This is one of the few Galaxy rigs I'll recommend. You can find them for about $289.99. Here's the link.

>and a linear to match

No need for a linear. A simple 2 or 3 el. Yagi (Maco?) will help you far more.

>i want to spent about 250

Plan on $300 and if you're really serious, add a Channel Guard IF filter and a SP-1a speech processor for about an extra 'C' note. Good luck now.

Not much, but you know sometimes just by what they are saying, you got to wonder if they really mean it. In Leland's case, I believe he's talking the truth on how he feels, that's the scary thing.

If you are implying that people, who

If the FCC hears them, they can be cited for operation out of band. In the earlier days of ham radio hams used separate receivers and transmitters and some were not too good on frequency readout. Many transmitters were capable of operation several Mhz above or below each ham band. Sometimes a ham would be mistakenly operating out of band and in those days the FCC monitored the ham bands very closely. You could not operate out of band long and not get caught. So, since you were using a ham call, then obviously you must be a ham, and if you transmission were not within the ham band you would be cited for out of band operation.
A ham call is assigned to the ham operator to be used in the amateur radio service, and if he uses it on the air it is assumed he is operating as a ham and is subject to part 97.

In Australia, n8wwm is not a valid ham call, so they can use it if they want, unless they use it in the ham bands, then the Australian equivalent of the FCC might get involved.

Dear drug soaked high school dropout and nwa wanna be,

Actually, if it was not for the cruelty to the children or the animals, I would prefer you pimp them. Reason: You will get more time that way. In reality, you can just keep on with yer mama. After all you pimped your family while you lived with them. Until they threw ya out, that is. Why stop now?

Make no mistake Dweebo, yer gonna end up in a cell. You got it all over you. No one, not even you, will know exactly how many lives you have shit on during your worthless egocentric existence. You are gonna be a 57 year old ex-con making parole after 11 yrs inside on your 2nd fall for a moderate level felony with aggravating circumstances. You will have emphysema, have had several bouts with hepatitis, and be a shell of your current physical self, and be addicted to opiate based IV drugs, crank, and downers...probably will do a string of burglaries within a week of leaving the joint, in order to set yourself up for a week or 2 of partying. You may even be busted before ya party, if the local LEA's burglary guys have good relations with pawnshops. Biiiig man, Dweebo...BIIIG man.

One thing I agree with crackhead Chapwoman on...cuz I have seen bunches of it...drugs and booze lay people low bigtime. Go ahead and stay your present course, it is the greatest gift you could ever give peoplewho hate you, as you will continually validate their emotions. You think you are an original...nope.

When you die you will be buried at county expense and bulldozed over 30 years later for a new set of projects. No one will give a damn. Prisons, nuthouses and graveyards...the destiny of anyone with your attitude. I mean anyone. Don't feel singled out.

Hey Doug you fat peice of usless shit. I see we still don't have a job, and we're still carrying on the one man crusade to rid the airwaves of all those nasty illegal cb'ers (oh sorry....federal criminals to you). Gosh, this has been going on for some time now, and for someone who owns the NG like you claim, it doesn't look like you have things very well under control. If I owned the group such as you, I would just block out all the annoying posts about cb equipment and the sort, and just post fcc rules and regs to tickle myself and pat myself on the back for being so smart. Maybe you need to get Fred (oh, sorry....I mean Aaron Voobner) to step up the efforts a little bit to help the cause. They must be. As Aaron loves to point out, this is a cb forum, an IRC chat room for hams would be better posted in a ham forum, so posting this in here serves no purpose except to enflame people.

If you are implying that people, who
hold ham licenses, should be somehow
held to a higher moral standard than
the "common man", then that would
be faulty logic. A ham license is only
a "permit" to use radio, it is not a
"badge of morality".

-------I may have told this story before, but for all needing:

One night our gang of idiots were snooping around in the Hollywood Hills and we came upon a friendly looking green steel cabinet nestled behind some shrubbery with a short little tower, sorta near the Hollywood Sign.

We pried the door open and to our surprise there was a large amplifier inside connected to the tower by a piece of coax that had to be RG-214 (I think?) or something similar, about two inches in diameter. The amp had the Civil Defense Logo on it, and lots of dust, but it fired right up.

We wasted no time in connecting one of our radios to the SO-239 and to our continued surprise we found that it would tune to the 11-meter band.

No fools we, keying down threw a virtual blanket over the entire SoCal area, and we even got a report from Lake Havasu that said we were pinning his needle like we were down the street.

The damn thing keyed up one of the linears inside our truck without anything connected to it.

The boilerplate on the amp stated that the power requirements called for three phase at 220V, 40 amperes.
Given the efficiency rating of a Class C tube amp in those days of antiquity, I would have to say that it was a 10 kW box, but our flashlights didnt reveal much more, and our pot-addled brains wouldn't have accepted much in the way of theory anyway.

All we knew was that we had stumbled upon some sort of piece of emergency communications gear that had been built during the Cold War Era, and forgotten.....maybe.....

Our remaining shreds of common sense told us that if Lake Havasu was getting ruptured eardrums, the folks in Long Beach must be microwaving popcorn, so after about fifteen, twenty minutes of sheer evil, we started to get a little worried, packed up and left, wiping away any traces of our visit.

I still find myself wondering if there were any visitors of the official type after our departure, and I wonder if that "little" monster is still sitting up there......

I can't even imagine what it would have done during daylight hours.....believe me, the temptation was strong indeed.

It was located about 4 miles up Sunset Plaza Drive, near the peak.

I also have heard some amazing stories about the equipment that used to be stashed at the old Nike Missile Base up on Saddlepeak....

anyone remember that place?

Or how about "The Crow's Nest", also known as Bienvenido Drive in Pacific Palisades. It's all built up now with houses, but in the eighties it was bare hills, and you could see all the way down to Palos Verdes from the top, and nail just about anywhere on the globe with only about a hundred watts and a little audio.

Does anyone know where I can purchase an older stock 25LTD or a Uniden 66 in new condition. Also can anyone shed some idea where the new Uniden CBs are being made. I have purchased a few Cobras in the last 2 years made in Thailand with many problems... cold solder joints and bad clarifiers.

Thanks,

I've always said, that if you're going to run illegally, at least have the sense to run clean, quality equipment. I have much less of a problem with freebanders, than I do with high power splatterboxers, who cause more than their share of interference.

Is Yaesu appeasing the FCC in some way by installing some type of crap inside a Yaesu FT-840 that makes it distort on the CB and Freeband...rendering the rig useless on those frequecies??? I did the mod on it, and gave it general coverage transmit. Works great on ten, fifteen and twenty meters so far. (Yes I'm licensed there...) But can't seem to work anyone on 11 meters. It's just as distorted as hell! (Yes, I know I'm not suppose to work with an 840 on 11 meters. But I ain't gonna buy a separate CB when 90% of the truckers are using illegal stuff themselves!)

You'll have to find the data sheets and compare the impedences of both

It's all related. Moral values are things that used to be drummed into people's heads from a very young age. Today, with the societal tide turning away from traditional family, community and religious organizations, the values that used to be taught are falling through the cracks. Today, people are much more self-centered, and care only about their own "rights", and not how to fit in and be a productive part of a family and community.

>From blatent disregard of human life, to the off-handed disregard for the rules of radio. It's all bread from the same place. Until we, as a society, fully understand this and the reasons why, we will be unable to correct it, and things will only get worse.

It is so great that even Hams come here. CB is growing by leaps and bounds. There are a few crybabies that whine and try to ruin the group but they can't...EVER:)
WHat makes me truly proud of the cb comunity and freeband cominity is that while we COULD invade the Ham groups and cause trouble we don't EVER. Cuase we are simply a better group of human beings.
There are a lot of great hams here too that give great advice. while they may frown severly on freebanding they respect that we dont go flamming around in Ham groups and in many cases are more civil on the freeband freqs then some Hams are on the Ham bands. Of course if they mention this the crybaby wanna be cbers jump all over and flame them.
Lts get one thing straight. The so called "anti-keyclown" few do not care about the spectrum, the law, or radio. They seek only to disrupt and attempt to ruin the best group and a great hobby. In this they will utterly FAIL:)

The caveates for running high power on a Super Scanner:

1. If you don't have a "stub" of RG 58 running out of the relay box for impedence matching, you can't run over about 50 watts in "omni" mode.

2. Do not switch the antenna directional modes while keyed, and running "high" power.

3. If you are careful, it has been reported that this antenna will handle 1500 watts.

He is leaving Galveston on a trip up north and wants Chuck to get him hooked up

They know the truth, that he is a drug and booze soaked high school dropout. he was thrown out of his parents house as a hopeless parasite, that he is a federal criminal, that he fantasizes about pimpin hoes as the absolute top of the economic ladder as his crack infested ass sees it. he CRINGES at further instances of such truth telling, and wants to beg the abti's to stop. Either that or maybe he thinks Chuck will bring him some anti boys to blow...whichever.

Chuck is his only hope, and he grasps at this straw desperately.

I dunno, Brian. Check it out....I never heard of a fraction of the amp makers until I came here.
This week it looks like they are getting more free PR. Lemme tell ya, there is no such thing as bad PR. The FCC know they all exist. A person contacting the FCC thinking they are bringing a revelation to the FCC concerning amp makers is ignorantly hilarious.
I have also learned more about what makes an amp biased from watching some of these long threads (yours included) about amps.
Anyone reading these pages can buy just about any amp of their choice and knows where to get it or who to turn to. All amps are not illegal.
I agree with Ken, the desired effect can and is having the polar opposite effect than that desired by the funny few. I keep reading that many of the old gang disappeared...many didn't....they're still here....lurking and posting...seeing all the attempted harassment that takes place from a few perverted-psychos, ya' can't really blame these guys for changing nics and emails. Wisdom is still being imparted among these pages, ya' just gotta poke around.

The remailers were created for the benefit of people that have to remain anonymous.
Whether they are in witness relocation programs or victims of a violent crime whatever the LEGITIMATE reason.
These are the people that need the remailing service, not the cowards that choose to use the service for flaming each other.
Raise the moral standards and stop abusing a great service that selected people need to make contact with others.
Don't take the chance of possibly ruining a good thing by abusing it and possibly making it more difficult for these victims to use the service.
I'm begging,pleading and asking this for the benefit of others. You know who

I don't know where you are coming from, or IF you even refer to the same person that posts in here as "Sparky". To compare sparky@cet.com to the late Dick McCollum is a mindless thing, not to mention a great insult. Regardless of what you say, if sparky were to assume room temperature today, he would never be remembered here as Dick M. will be.
You talk as if sparky isn't coming back. What did he do, lose another ISP or something?
I agree with the last sentence of your post, just not who you choose to give warm fuzzies to.

That is correct, even on my Kenwood TS-950SDX, if you've got too much carrier running you start sounding like your talking through a Kazoo... This is the case when your operating on AM. Which I like to do on 75 meters, only I don't like is those ol' boys get SOOOOO LOOOOONG winded! Heck, you can go take a leak, make a sammich, (hillybilly talk for food) make love to your wife, change the oil in your car and still have a few minutes before your turn comes around!

"Sparky" is good people neighbor, i believe the constant bashing from the anti's is the reason for Sparkys lack of appearance.
Whatever the reason he will always be remembered here as well as the late and great "Richard McCollum". People come and people go but we will always respect the great and intelligent people that have graced the pages of rec.radio.cb.....<<

I don't know where you are coming from, or IF you even refer to the same person that posts in here as "Sparky". To compare sparky@cet.com to the late Dick McCollum is a mindless thing, not to mention a great insult.
Regardless of what you say, if sparky were to assume room temperature today, he would never be remembered here as Dick M. will be.
You talk as if sparky isn't coming back. What did he do, lose another ISP or something?
I agree with the last sentence of your post, just not who you choose to give warm fuzzies to.

I wonder if this would be going on if the hams had stayed in the ham groups...I mean lik they could have come in here and gathered their information aas to who was selling what and who was breaking what ever regulation and quietly went on their way and did what they feel they have to do.BUT no some individuals for lack of self esteem,low iQ or what ever had to do it and make sure every body knows who does it and to whom to boost their tiny and sick ego/mind.Now gentlemen what does that really tell you?And that is the problem...pure and simple..NOTE...I mentioned no name or affiliations other than hams an only in the context of actions that speak for them selves...There are hams in here that dont cause any problems.Hell most of Us got our start on cb so is it written that when you upgrade you abandon the bands you operated before?Agaion I point out-you can quetly get your information and turn in whoever for what ever but dont show your ass while doing it.If your object is intimidation,I dont see that happening any time soon.If every cb operator left this group today they would be on the cb band tomorrow so what have you accomplished.NADA...Well I have thrown in my 2 cents and I just plan on totally ignoring certain individuals.Beleive me that is the best weapon in the arsenal..ignore,ignore,ignore.....Am I wrong?

About all of the mid price range HF rigs do this on AM.I have a Dx77T and an FT 817 and even with the carrier pulled in like it is supposed to be the AM audio sux.Also had an 840.
Seems to me I remember something abou the nois blanker and audio somehow affecting each other.Oh well I will remember it later.
You have to realize that AM is purely a secondary convienience in these rigs and not a lot of trouble was taken in the engineering to have hi fi AM audio.Some of the higher end rigs well that's another matter.I have heard a few of them properly run that have pretty damn good audio.
You want good hi fi AM audio mobile??Get Johnson Ranger and a power inverter.Yeh I know,not too practical... ;-)

You would think that a guy with my type of work would quit such stuff Oh well i have no excuse.
I'd like to see some of these guys go up there and tell the guys in the salmon and crab fleets that they cant operate above 40 that would be real interesting.Hm come to think of it I dont think the FCC field office in Anchorage much cares what any body does up there as long as you arent a nusance and dont jam and shit.
There has to be at least a half dozen LP FM pirates in the Anchorage area alone and they never get bothered.Probably because the big stations up there(all 6 of them,mostly 5 kw only LOL) dont have the big cooperate bent nose attitude like they do down here and everybody laughs at it including the FCC guys.No complaints/no problem...thats the way it ought to be.
Hell 4 years ago when they had Gold Rush days(sort of like a state fair) There were 3 of the LP FM guys doing live broadcasts in the wide open spaces interviewing people,handing out bumper stickers and the whole deal.I know for a damn fact that there were FCC guys around.
Yep a whole different deal up thereThe fishing boats are about all above 40 now so are the local aircraft as you already know. Beleive me they are there 24/7 because 11 meters is good dependable 24/7 short range(like 50 miles on water or in the air averge) and everybody has one.They hang above 40 for the last few years because of the solar cycle and the band is useless below 40.When the cycle dies back down the boats will be on 10 and the planes on 7 just like always...Quick somebody call Riley...yeh right..they would laugh his ass all the way down the AlCan highway.2 meters is the same way.You hear all kinds of people on the Denali repeater that arent licensed.Nobody cares because they dont abuse it.They say bring me what ever or a like message and they leave.No complaints/no problem...Man I will be glad to get back up there next year.....I am sorry but the lower 48 generally sux and is regulated to death but I am sure there are those that would feel the same about AK.I just came down here for a bit to hang out with family.Mostly my gransons...Oh crap!!did I get off the NG topic...Hmmmm seems to be appropriate.....You know...I almost bet I talked to one of those MI boys while I was airborne up there...There was one in Flint I talked to a couple of times I know.Hell I used to talk to half the damn world when i was aeronautical mobiling.....All I had to say was AF28 aeronautical mobile and instant pileup.....Ok,i'm outta here... Later.....You guys behave now

Concerning VOOB and others like him...."It's not what you do but how you do it"That is where the problem comes in...You can gather info on illegal equipt and rule violations without bringing attention to your self which is obviously the intent.I have said it before I will say it again.every cber could leave this group today and they would still be on cb/freeband or what ever and running whatever...now was anything accomplished as far as diminishing illegal activity..NOOOO the only thing acconplished would be inflated false egos and getting attention even if it is negative....this is not a rant...heartbeat/normal blood pressure/normal...just like always>>>>>nuff said

2950's are junk. Unstable, prone to fail due to vibration, the worst choice for mobile rig in a truck. Don't buy it if you plan to use it on sideband. The receiver leaves a lot to be desired as well. Rumor is that the new ones are a little more durable, but based on previous track records I wouldn't touch it with a 10 foot pole.....especially an older one.

Well there ya have it.Pros and cons...I have 2 2950's and a 2900.All have been used in rough enviorments.Like one I used in a bush plane in Alaska for over a year.Thrown around,dropped you name it.The only failures I have had was panel lights replaced three times in about 12 years,I think it was the VCO ground came loose from the chassis--a common problem that is eliminated by replacing with a flexable wire instead of the leg off the VCO or even if it is ok do the fix anyway.Stock the audio is ok but not great but this can be fixed.I agree with the instability/off freq issue but the only time I had a problem with this was in extreme cold or actually down in the teens at least..I would say overall not a bad radio.
I woul say however,if you are going to buy it for $175 the guy needs to put a mike on it and show you it works.....Never buy from a guy that says....It was working great yesterday...

The only reason it would be is because they are hard to find they are Old outdated equipment, great in it's day but in no way will it do a 1/3 of what a "rice burner" will do on a bad day TX or RX. No comparision it is a Lets see, my Collins will transmit and receive on any of the ham bands I am intercede in, using SSB or CW. I can communicate with other hams on the bands, it is vfo controlled so I can go anywhere on the ham bands. Same thing your rice box will do. No, I don't have 100 memories to store frequencies in (why do I need that anyway?), or a couple dozen buttons to push or other gizmos. Yet it will communicate just as well as any rice box. It can hear just as well as any rice box. It is 50 years old, still works like new and I can fix it if or when it breaks. Will your rice box still be working like new 50 years from now? Maybe. Can you fix your rice box?

Well while I have had my run ins with Frank, he has made it evident through previous posts that what Doug and others are doing is not his cup of tea. He believes in legal radio and that's fine, but I don't believe he is "Aaron" nor do I believe he is flooding the group through anon servers.
As to comparing him to Richard, well only time will give us that answer. I notice on another post that Twist didn't quite agree, well while sometimes I find Frank's arrogance a little to much, But he is knowledgeable on antennas and has given some good advice (that's more than George, Aaron & Doug has ever done on this group).
I do still reserve the right to argue with him and will do so in the future.

If you are implying that people, who
hold ham licenses, should be somehow

held to a higher moral standard than
the "common man", then that would
be faulty logic. A ham license is only
a "permit" to use radio, it is not a
"badge of morality".

You seem to have a great problem with reading comprehension. I did not say the qsk guys were truckers, but you can bet your bippy that truckers are using 28.015 as well 28.085 and other frequencies in the 10 meter band. I have monitored them many times. I have had on several occasions someone try to break into a phone QSO by calling qsk, then give some goofy cb handle. They are not licensed hams, just cbers using radios capable of operation in the 10 meter band.

Thing is, George couldn't fix a lightswitch. Nancy will buy him a new

So you radio alone leaks more RF than a 200 watt yaesu, then there you have it at least 1 example that it is inferior to the latest radios. Ill bet you guys still use rotary phones too.

Um... almost right, but not really.

Some of the loaded 5/8 designs have a better radiation pattern than the 1/4 wave whips, but this is design and installation dependent.

Blanket statements like that are hard to back up sometimes.

I gotta go with the Grant XL on this one.. I've been running the same Grant for the last 8 years, it's been thru 2 car accidents, dropped a few times, and the only thing I've had to do to it is replace the AM power regulator once.. (I added a heatsink to the back for the regulator, to keep it cool, now it doesn't overheat anymore).

Good, solid, rugged piece of equipment, IMHO. Well worth the $129 I spent at Copper for it.

It is and HF rig, not meant to transmit on UHF/VHF or 6 meters. If I wanted to use those bands I would purchase a rig for those frequencies.

Yep, I can run split, transceive mode, and can certainly operate cross band. Why do I need to cross band repeat? Why do I need to split modes?

Got double conversion...good enough, don't need dsp or adjustable or programable filters with a good rig.

Gee, you already had to fix your rice box that many times? I have owned this Collins for over 30 years and have only had to replace an electrolytic in the receiver. Wait till the one of those fancy gizmos in your rice box goes out.

I would suggest that in light of the tragic events that happened to our country and countrymen on 9/11/01 that in honor of those who died, those who gave there lives so others might live, and in honor of our country, we cease and desist our arguing, name calling, and kicking each other on the group for a 24 hour period. Since it is already past midnight on the east coast, lets begin at midnight CST. After all, what we argue about here is small potatoes compared to those events.

People like Richard are very rare. There is no one presently posting here who is even close. I only have known a couple of others like him, neither of who posted to this group - and both of them died at a rather young age. And all this during a time span of about 15 years of active posting to and reading various newsgroups.

Ok, you are saying that voluntary compliance with federal regulations is equivalent to supporting the Third Reich? And you think that every law-abiding citizen in the US wants to exterminate the Jews? That's what you are saying, and that's totally fucked up -- without exeption.
No wonder the only positive responses to your posts come from idiots.

BTW, have you met "Dave or Debby"? Sounds like you two (three?) might get along just fine.

You mean you really think that he want's to shoot every illegal operator in the head? Perhaps you want to believe it because it is something which supports that which you do not -- people that oppose illegal operation. IOW, you believe it because you don't like anyone criticizing illegal behavior.

Hey folks, just for today, let's all put our differences aside. Please. Let's do so not because we are right or wrong. Let's do so because we are all human beings. Let's do so in memory of those who lost thier lives. It very well could have been any of us that died. Is Ranger still making the Cobra radios? I have a 148GTLSTNW that has been to Cobra twice in the last year. Once they diagnosed as cold solder joints and once a bad clarifier, no I did no mods on this radio just a simple tuneup. I also have a Cobra 21LTDST that I have had problems with....namely cold solder joints and a bad SO239 connector at the back of the radio.

I also have a Uniden Grant XL that I have had no trouble with. It is 6 years old no mods just a tune up. It has good power output and great audio.

Do you have an opinion on the Uniden 68XL and the 68XLW?

I don't know, do you think he wants too? Ask those kids that died at Columbine, when know one believed that those guys would actually do what they said either. As for my not agreeing with his beliefs of being pro legal cb, please.
Within days after 9/11 he was comparing illegal cb'ers to terrorists and said that they should be shot in the head like terrorist. If someone pro illegal said that, I would be just as upset with that type of thinking being shown at the time.

I spent a week in Germany and a week in Switzerland, I'll tell you Switzerland is an unfriendly place, beautiful, but not friendly at all. Germany though was fun and the people were very friendly towards Americans (at least that's the way
I felt). I was in Sweden for 2 weeks visiting my sister, there

If you are implying that people, who
hold ham licenses, should be somehow
held to a higher moral standard than
the "common man", then that would
be faulty logic. A ham license is only
a "permit" to use radio, it is not a
"badge of morality".

Unfortunately, you've fallen into the same little hole some companies have chosen to dig for you. You've fallen into the notion that whatever Micro$oft, or it's partners, or other "protection" software companies tell you is true.

Hate to tell you this, but the only secure system on the internet is the system that never gets connected to the internet.

There is NO SUCH THING as being 100% secure on the 'net; if you think there is, you're deluded.

Oh, and you might consider posting your replies to the same thread as the original... your "Aaronness" is showing.

Yeh I know Tim but I am not much of a joiner...I useed the KP28 when talking to the KP Guys but other than that I am AF28 and have been since around 73/74 back when ssb was pretty much non existant on cb.Back the the AF stood for all frequency and there were very few of us in the club as such.#1 requirement was you had to operate an old hasm rig with 11 meters on it.At the time I had a DX100,Collins 32V3 and a couple of smalkler rigs like a DX60 and a Johnson Ranger.I still have the 32V3 and Ranger Transmitters. as well as the Collins 75A2 and R 390A receivers.
It has been interesting watching the evolution of cb radio.Or maybe I should say digression.well I will put it like this...equiptment has evolved....I dont knopw about the rest.
Used to be fun when it was a common bond amongst local friends and you used to have coffe breaks and stuff.I guess it still goes on in some places.
But for the most part people have drifted away from cb because of all the crap.

Uniden makes a good product. The older Uniden / Cobra CB's are better. The Tawain / Phillipines chassis. These rigs can scream, when tuned correctly.

The Ranger products have been getting much better. Texas Ranger is a good product. Ranger has really been listening, and the quality has gone up. The Texas Rangers are even giving the old Uniden / Cobras a run for the money.

I opted for a Channel Guard IF filter and a SP-1a speech processor.
The heatsink is an interesting addition. Cool! (No pun intended.)

Doug, please learn to read headers. You can send all the made up garbage you want to RR. THEY have the record of whether it came from this account or not. And since it obviously didn't, there is nothing going to be done. BTW, what carries more clout...whining with made up proof, or $600 a year? Methinks the latter does with RR. Your mileage may vary.

In the spirit of the day, I won't flame you. Tomorrow will be different. If you need help with the headers, I'll be more than happy to read them to you. Send me the headers from the email. If you can't do that, I'll understand why.

Tim, he's a bit frustrated now. He emailed me accusing me of sending mail to his "throwaway" account, threatening to have my RR account terminated. He has not figured out there is more in headers than meets the casual eye. He may not be able to read them, but RR can. IF I had sent the email, I'm sure I would have heard from RR by now. Not a peep from them.

The list is now up to 22 members of the US House of Representatives who have agreed to cosponsor the measure. It includes two amateurs--Oregon Republican Greg Walden, WB7OCE--one of the two original cosponsors of HR 4720 with Texas Republican Pete Sessions--and Arkansas Democrat Mike Ross, WD5DVR.

If you are looking for a new one, maybe a truck stop. Some still carry ones like the Uniden Grant and others. The price will be a little higher at truck stops though. You might even want to try one of the super Walmarts. I first visited one earlier this year and they did have some Uniden Grants for around $150.

As for used radios, there are plenty to be found at flea markets and yard sales. At one time, I had accumulated over 60 mobile CB's, mostly AM but a couple were the old 23 channel SSB crystal models. I don't think I ever paid more than $5 for any one radio. Sometimes, you'll run into nicer models, like an old 148 or Grant, or even a base. If you are patient, you should be able to shop around and pick a better model up for maybe $30-50. Of course, most of the time you'll have no way to tell whether or not it works going the used route.

Hope this helps!

Yep, Scott. I had Linux up and running for a while, but a couple of times the dogs pulled the plug on me and caused a 'minor' glitch. I recovered in Linux, and the only 'minor' glitch that remained was that everytime I emptied the recycle bin in Win 98, it reported that it couldn't delete file (a bunch of unintelligable characters), and then emptied the recycle bin. This went on for about 2 weeks (and a couple of defrags) with no further problem. Then, the third time I defragged ... hoo boy! It would NOT boot to anything. I ended up booting from the Linux CD, removing all Linux partitions, then going after the stupid hard drive with fdisk. All back and in order, but no more dual boot systems for me - can't trust Windows. Geeze, now at work the are providing triple boot systems - Windoze 2000, Win 98SE, and DOS 6.22. Not only didn't we ever complete the transition to metric (you find mixes of ASE and metric threads on a given piece of tooling), we never completed the transition from DOS! We've got programs that run in dos and we have to ensure the things can run. I wrote a program in Visual Basic 6 - and we have to see if it can run in 2000 or if we'll need 98. Ain't compooting fun?

You dont get it, dorky boy...

It is mind over matter...We dont mind and you dont matter. You think anti-boys CARE if you know? Boy you must not pay any attention at all on this NG. We own it. All you can do is whine and cry. The facts are simple. You are federal criminals...whatever you do and say is only to defocus from that truth. Blame, forge, accuse, do what you want. Whoopie, twithed. Anything that makes you jump up and down and whine makes us laugh. You aint nuthin but a sawed off cracker boy with a fuggly kid.

If we want to hide a deed we would. And you keyqueens wont have a chance of finding it if we do.

Hehehhe...

I am not sure there are many companies making base CBs at this time. You still might be able to find some old stock. In your local yellow pages look under radio then Citizens Band. If not try Copper, Bills2way, or Lees. Also there is a big shop in Wilmington, Delaware called R&R Communications. Hope this helps.

Keep checking that hit-counter often, because it's going to be even higher every time you check it! (What a moron.)

But since you think that there is something special about 1900 hits (is 1900 a 'magic number' or something?), I can only conclude that the vast majority of those hits are from keyclowns checking in everyday to see how many hits there are, which reflects nothing more than an extraordinary waste of time.

We get a lot of slamming going on this ng . Some of it funny some pretty raunchy , and some downright personnel.
How ever I for one have never and never will make racial comments as to degrade Who I am, And I hope their are many on this ng that share the same feeling's .
Wanna stir up some shit ?
Bring Your faggot pot bellied ass to Texas and You will get what Your looking for .
You are very easy to profile :
Your fat , lazy , unemployed , on welfare , Your children and wife smell of piss , You live in a trailer home , You have one tooth left in Your head which is best used as a bottle opener / finger nail cleaner , Your hair is long and scraggly with lice , Your children are so ugly it suggests that You are into bestiality possibly chicken's or woodrat's.
So there You have it : You have been profiled ,
Now if You were really a bad ass , You wouldn't have a problem letting us know Who You are or Where You are .
So do You mind sharing that info with the News Group or are You afraid You might be found somewhere with You little dick cut off and shoved down Your fucking throat ?
I think You'll find out that not all White People are like You BITCH!!!!!!

I'm not sure how those counters work. Do they put a cookie in the 'puter so it doesn't count twice? If so, then they ASSUME it is accurate (only counts new hits); problem is that a lot of us mark a few cookies to keep and clean the rest of 'em out every time we leave the internet.

This is stupid. It is government sticking its nose where it has no right to be.
If a person is STUPID enough to buy property with a restricted deen or a covenant attached to it and later think they can get out of it by legislation, they should have been bright enough to have NOT bought the property in the first place.

I take it the opposite way. I think covenants are bullcrap and a property owner should be able to do most anything he wishes on his own property (within reason)--like erect antennas without some old blue-haired busybody looking over her Ben Franklins a-tellin' me what I can or can't do on my own property. These days, restrictive covenants are almost automatic in all housing developments. You ARE right that people have the option of choosing property that doesn't have restrictions (I did), but I am also told that this is getting harder and harder to do.

Dick:

The usenet newsgroups are of two basic types: moderated and unmoderated.

The moderated newsgroups are in the minority. They work by publishing a set of rules -- the rules mainly say what topic will be discussed on the group and that no personal attacks or off-topic material will be allowed. When you post to a moderated group, your message goes to a moderator -- moderators are volunteers who agree to enforce the rules.

The moderator (or several moderators) reads your article to ensure it meets the newsgroup standards. If it does, he posts it. If not, he rejects it back to you with an explanation and an opportunity to appeal.

Unmoderated newsgroups are free fire zones. Say what you want, how you want, to or about whom you want. Try to stay on the topic of the newsgroup -- for example, on this group, don't post articles about aliens in Roswell and your Britney Spears navel fetish. However, if someone says something dumb, and you want to tell him he is dumb as dirt, well, have at it.

People being what they are, in any group there will be a few who have not matured beyond the sixth grade and who revel in potty jokes and in calling other people obscene names. They are the minority but they get a lot of attention and, sometimes, they post the majority of the articles.

Ignore them. Post your question or comment; reasonable people will converse with you.

Just my opinion.

Joe S.

Moderated groups are the answer. Still, some people don't enjoy having their posts censored by a moderator. Doesn't bother me in the least bit, personally. I set up STUMP to help moderate alt.parenting.attachment for a friend of mine (some of those women are nazi like, but that's another post for another group). This way, a linux box does a great deal of the moderating instead of a human :)

Once a non-moderated news group is created, it cannot be controlled. It is not "owned" by anybody. The only way for it to go away is for news server admins to quit carrying the group (unlikely). However, if somebody posts something that you find rather objectionable, you can see if it violates their ISP's TOS agreement (found on any ISP's website) If so, send an email that includes the post and all headers to their abuse address. If it doesn't violate a TOS agreement, or the ISP doesn't do anything to stop it (they have that right) then your out of luck. Use a newsreader that supports the use of a killfile. I dig XNews, myself (on Win32 machines).

I was helping out a friend of mine with his new Wireles Access Point over the phone, and I said something like "Hey, try and ping 192.168.0.1 for me". He said "How did you know that was it's address, I never told you".

Lucky guess :)

Now and then I like 10.x.x.x/16 for variety. Sure a 16 bit mask is a bit much for my little 'ol network here at the house, but why be a conformist? :)

A relative of mine insisted that neither I nor anybody else could hack his machine because he was behind his company's firewall (a Cisco PIX, which is a nice one). I told him that he shouldn't be so arrogant and that NOBODY is 100% safe (I've run across PIX exploits now and then). Still, I applauded his company for choosing a nice firewall to protect his unassuming butt.

I let a couple of months go by without saying anything. During this time I whipped up a quick and dirty little trojan in VB and emailed it to him. I didn't feel like writing anything spiffy, so on the surface it just gave a bogus error message and died. I told him a friend sent it to me and it worked great on my end. I told him to just delete the thing.

Underneath is where the fun begins. It copied itself to C:\windows \system32 (he's on a win98 machine). It also added a line to HKEY_LOCAL_MACHINE\Software\Microsoft\Windows\CurrentVersion\Run that called the program on every boot. The program was called with a command line option that allowed it to run hidden. I figured that the PIX was probably configured with a stateful filter that allowed replies to port 80 traffic originating from the inside. I was right. The program queried a service (again, hastily written in VB) running on my machine every 15 minutes over port 80 (pretty unassuming) waiting for a task. Since his machine was initiating the connection, reply traffic from my machine was allowed through the firewall.

So I'm chatting with him one day on IRC and started saying that he may not be as safe as he thinks he is. I let him BS (the more the merrier) as much as possible. I wanted him to be as arrogant as possible. He insisted that there was no way anybody could hack his PC. So I set my little VB app on my machine to instruct the app running on his machine to move the icons on his desktop to C:\windows\temp on the next polling cycle. It worked. I said "Hey, look at your desktop and notice that I've deleted all of your icons". He freaked out. Man, that was sweet. I told him that they were moved to C:\windows\temp and told him how to remove the trojan.

It takes a wee bit of work sometimes - and perhaps a trusting victim - but it can be done....even with a really good firewall. Ya just never know :)

It's VERY hard to do in my area. Almost all new housing developments have some sort of CC&R's attached. Most include restrictions on antenna structures. The only way to buy new and avoid CC&R's is to custom build on you own piece of dirt, and that's a logistical nightmare. I chose a neighborhood with the LEAST offensive restrictions. Mine allow antennas as long as they are not above the roof. For VHF and UHF and even horizontal HF it's not too much of a problem. At least I'm at 400' ASL.

Hello Bert:

This is the famous Avanti "Austro Beam". It has insulated Reflector and Director Elements. It has fantastic rejection on its back side, approx. 40 dB, pretty good.

By the time you ran down the materials, and made one, it would be several hundred dollars, in time and materials. I'd say this antenna is worth 100 to 150 dollar range.

If you are implying that people, who
hold ham licenses, should be somehow
held to a higher moral standard than
the "common man", then that would
be faulty logic. A ham license is only
a "permit" to use radio, it is not a
"badge of morality".

You can't get to an internal IP address like the one you posted without first knowing what the actual IP address to your modem is... That's like me telling you that my IP address is 192.168.0.1 (which it is mind you), but that's not the actual IP address... There isn't one in your message headers either (like mine,) so that leave you fairly safe from those of us in the group I'd say...

BTW, I'm not worried about memory and resources... I have more than I could ever need, and the computer is plenty fast enough to handle it. Besides, the trojan, spyware, etc. scanners don't run constantly. The only thing that runs all the time is the software firewall, and the antivirus....

Care to elaborate on adding an RF choke from the antenna input to ground? How would one accomplish this?

Jerry & Tra1n,
I agree with both of you in that I don't care for deed CC&R's. I also don't believe that legislation is the way to go about breaking a contract, which is exactly what this would be.
Buying a house is a contract between buyer and seller.
The seller puts the conditions of the sale on paper, and if the buyer agrees to those conditions he signs the contract. If the buyer later wants to change the contract, that's just too bad, unless he can get the seller to agree to the change. The time to argue about the conditions of a sale is ~before~ signing the contract, not after.
If this bill is passed I think it will open up a bad 'can of worms' by setting a precident that can, and will, affect other areas of contract law. While I would 'like' to see it pass, because if I should ever buy another house I want to be able to put up an antenna. I also hope that is doesn't pass because it will affect other areas of contract law which could, and probably will open up a bad 'can of worms'.
One question, would this bill be retroactive, or only for sales of property after it's passed?
'Doc

Some radios already have a choke installed at the output jack, so check that first. If it has one, check to see if it's blown open (usual cause of failure is the use of the radio with a cheap linear). If there isn't one, or if it's bad, dig through your junkbox for a choke between 4.7 to 22 uH. Hook one end to the antenna terminal and the other end to ground. You can make this connection inside the radio at the antenna jack, at the antenna mount (best), or at any point inbetween. BTW, if you are running power you need to select your choke carefully or it will just be a waste of time (and maybe the amp).

I found I had a pretty poor ground on my 97 Dodge between the truck bed and chassis ground. I ran a couple of extra grounding straps between the bed and the cab/Chassis and that helped things out SWR wise tremendously.

Points taken, but I object to a seller being able to tell me what I can do with my own property forever; IOW, he has "sold" the property to me, but still has some "control" over what is supposed to be MINE. After I have taken control, what I do on that property within reason should be no one else's beeswax. I happen to think antennas are reasonable! hehe!

The Avanti AstroBeam was a ruggedly built antenna. I had occasion to assemble and install one back in the mid-late seventies. Contingent that this is NOS the construction is all heavy gauge material and the hardware included was all top-notch. I vaguely recall the antenna delivered exceptional service surviving many severe winter ice storms in the northeast lasting more than a decade before I lost touch with the owner.

It's relative compact size was really appealing when this antenna was manufactured and shouldn't be confused with the flimsy construction of similar three element beams from that era. If I was actively engaged in the hobby today I would give strong consideration on bidding.

Well, I tend to agree with you somewhat, but what is considered "within reason" by someone else may not be considered "within reason" by you. Suppose this blue-haired busybody hubby wants to erect a pig pen to raise pigs. That may be totally "within reason" to him, but after you get the smell you may think differently. So who decides what is "within reason" and how do you control it?
To you a tower and antenna my be "within reason" but to your neighbor it may not be. Who decides?

YOU are the epitome of dumb, Doug (Doggie) Adair. Why aren't you

I don't see why you have such a problem with Doug (and we haven't even talked about your own no-code staus). Keyclowns want to "rule" a CB channel (or dozens of them) and push legit users out. Pirates and freebanders want to "rule" parts of the spectrum they're not authorized to operate in and trample the allocations of legit assignees. Doug wants to "rule" this newsgroup. What's the problem? ;

Why not use your killfile? Are you compelled to read each and every one of his posts? Is Doug's hold on you so all-powerful that you have no control over what you see? No of course not. You DO have a choice. You can set up your newsreader so you never even SEE his posts. But no, you do the opposite. You deliberately set up your newsreader to see and read his posts. And then you choose to respond to them. And then you blame him for your actions.Tsk. Tsk. Pretty pathetic if you ask me. Heck, I don't agree with the illegals in this NG - but at least I don't try and blame them for making me read their posts, LOL!

>All I'm asking from him is a fair fight,with the ref and gloves.

As self appointed "Keyclown Spokesperson", you might want to consider that keyclowns choose to "ignore" rules and urge others to do the same. If you doubt that, look up any of the archived posts of Train, Twisted, and Landshark. So under the circumstances, your request for a "fair" fight seems a bit, er, disingenious. It's kind of like keyclowns complaining about other keyclowns cheating during their RF sparrow-cooking competitions.

Yeah, Aaron. What about it? What's wrong with the proposal. Sounds like a great way to settle a dispute.

Now then, everyone prepare for Aaron's attempt to change the subject. Doug's all talk, and Aaron is his other mouth. This is about one on one, Aaron. Don't attempt to drag other criteria or persons into it. Answer the question, for just once. If you're scared, just say you're scared. That's all it takes.

Well, I don't have a junk box and I really couldn't do what you are telling me to do. I don't run any power, only the stock 30 watts or so on SSB that the radio automatically does. I guess I'll have to live with a little noise when the a/c is running.

It does not matter if a person exactly duplicates the headers from a site, then attaches a fake message. There is one obvious clue that the message is a forgery, and that is that the path does not match. For the ISP, it is even easier. All they have to do is check the transmit log.

Actually, we might get lucky and have it be the first step in making

To be useful, it would have to be retroactive.

This, like many rec and alt newsgroups, is unmoderated. If someone gets too far out of line, the most you can do is complain to their ISP, if you can figure out who that is. Many post through "anonymizer" services, so that they cannot be traced.

Other than that, if the posts bother you too much - your only option is to either kill file the offenders (if you can) or just not read the group.

Unfortunately, that is often all that happens, you get the automated message. If Yahoo is like other ISPs, then they actually take action on only a very small fraction of the complaints.

This was a great antenna in its day. Assembled from better quality stuff than most of today's counterparts.

The front to back ratio was somewhere around the 40db area and forward gain was about 7db.

The only real drawback was that it doesn't have much in the way of bandwidth. you could get from 26.5-27.5 under 2:1 but it crept up quickly outside these points.

It sold new for about $100 back then. Good antenna and worth the lil extra.
Doesn't need much of a rotor either.

        I agree with both of you in that I don't care for deed CC&R's. I also don't believe that legislation is the way to go about breaking a contract, which is exactly what this would be.
      Buying a house is a contract between buyer and seller.
The seller puts the conditions of the sale on paper, and if the buyer agrees to those conditions he signs the contract. If the buyer later wants to change the contract, that's just too bad, unless he can get the seller to agree to the change. The time to argue about the conditions of a sale is ~before~ signing the contract, not after.   If this bill is passed I think it will open up a bad 'can of worms' by setting a precident that can, and will, affect other areas of contract law. While I would 'like' to see it pass, because if I should ever buy another house I want to be able to put up an antenna. I also hope that is doesn't pass because it will affect other areas of contract law which could, and probably will open up a bad 'can of worms'.
      One question, would this bill be retroactive, or only
for sales of property after it's passed?

Points taken, but I object to a seller being able to tell me what I can do with my own property forever; IOW, he has "sold" the property to me, but still has some "control" over what is supposed to be MINE. After I have taken control, what I do on that property within reason should be no one else's beeswax. I happen to think antennas are reasonable! hehe!
Jerry
--
Hiya Jer! Let's get real about it. If one buys into a place with restrictions, too bad for you if you wish to VIOLATE those RULES in the future. This forum is a perfect example of how what constitutes "within reason" greatly differs among us.
  When you buy a house in a subdivision and it says "no commercial trucks or vehicles", then you don't bring home the 18 wheeler or cement truck with "Bill's Construction" on the side.
My area was zoned for agricultural not too far back...now I can walk to what is zoned as "business" on the other side of what is zoned
"residential", of which is shrinking. I must now garage one of my recreational vehicles/crafts at all times, as only one is now permitted per property owner. In other words, I cant have my camper AND a boat in my yard at the same time if it is visible from the street.
It wasn't like this just a few short years ago.

Even had a visit from a councilwoman to see if I was running a kennel...(business in residential = special permit) I was tempted to tell her "only on the internet" <g>,, but kept quiet. She put down a reserve for Christmas.
Using your stated input as a means of showing how well I understand your position, some that wish to violate those rules may say, "Well, I happen to think commercial vehicles are fine as long as they aren't BIG trucks."
Another point you made to draw from is "Where do we draw the line?" concerning the freebanders. To you, I ask the same. If we allow you to have an antenna, what next? You'll want a mast, or worse, a tower (gasp)!
To debate those rules that you would attempt to circumvent is akin to debating the FCC rules...as I point you in the direction of the many, many posts you reiterated that "The rules are there for a reason."
What's good for the goose.....

To be fair, let us not ignore Lelnad's attempts at circumventing his apartment rules concerning antennas. Let us not ignore NWWM selling illegal goods on the internet.
Let us not ignore Jerry for his slightly-hypocritical stance that rules for cbers are there for a reason but for hammies, some rules are not fair and should be done away with.
And finally, let us not lose sight of the many, many access ports to this group and ISP's that were lost because of your behavior, Dogie's behavior, and KC8LDO's behavior.
As you say, all in the archives...since you can't find a single post of

You still believe that, Aanal Aaron? Even your buddy George Busch doesn't believe it, but you're so aanal, frustrated, and desperate that you'll believe anything, even if it comes from a Federal Criminal and a guy (KE4ENX) who has been caught jamming 2m repeaters in Atlanta and Cornelia, GA. And you still can't spell Steve's name correctly, even with it right in front of you. There's no "t" in Rogovich, dimbulb! Whuzza matta, thinking with the wrong head again?

Let me type this very slowly so maybe you'll comprehend it this time: I'm not Steve. I'm as much Steve as you are Aaron. In other words, you're wrong AGAIN, as usual.

I sincerely hope that, if you keep posting his information for incorrect reasons, he'll get you TOSsed!

I don't see Jerry advocating a "Free Antenna" Movement where everybody is urged to defy the law (like freebanders do). He isn't telling people to erect antennas because "nobody cares" and "you won't get caught". He is advocating a (private) contractual solution or a (public) legislative solution. Either are within the law.

>To debate those rules that you would attempt to circumvent is akin to

>What's good for the goose.......

The rules are there to serve the people, and can be changed and modifed by legal process. It's done everyday. If you feel a rule or law does not reflect the good of the majority, you are free to work to change it. Feeling that a law or rule is unfair doesn't give you permission to violate it. This is especially poignant in the case of "freebanding".

Hi Jamey, My name is Woody Parr and I'm up the road in Cornelia. I'm afraid that I'm indirectly responsible for this troll who is badmouthing you at alt.religion.urantiabook. You see he was only there in the first place to attack me.

This idiot is Steven J. Rogovich, 1612 Lake Christopher dr. Virginia Beach, Va. 23464 He followed me to the UB usenet page from alt.radio.pirate He and I (were) both formerly loosely associated with each other in the shortwave pirate radio listening hobby. I USED to be a shortwave pirate but my station has been permanently retired for more than 2 years now. Stevie is still a pirate and is the operator of the station Radio Free Speech. He is also the moderator of a message board at the Free Radio Network < www.frn.net > and goes by the handle of Pat Murphy there. I had a falling out with the people at the FRN a couple of years ago as they became corrupt and were doing so inappropriate things. I dared to open my mouth and openly complain about there stupid activities which since they havn't yet ceased to follow me around the internet anywhere they can and attack me.

Steve is also on the usenet trolling people under the name of Richard Cranium (richardcranus@yahoo.com) He's far too much of a coward to debate anyone using his real name.

I agree with both of you in that I don't care
for deed CC&R's. I also don't believe that legislation is the way to go about breaking a contract, which is exactly what this would be.
Buying a house is a contract between buyer and seller.
The seller puts the conditions of the sale on paper, and if the buyer agrees to those conditions he signs the contract. If the buyer later wants to change the contract, that's just too bad, unless he can get the seller to agree to the change. The time to argue about the conditions of a sale is ~before~ signing the contract, not after. If this bill is passed I think it will open up a bad 'can of worms' by setting a precident that can, and will, affect other areas of contract
law. While I would 'like' to see it pass, because if I should ever buy another house I want to be able to put up an antenna. I also hope that is doesn't pass because it will affect other areas of contract law which could, and probably will open up a bad 'can of worms'.
One question, would this bill be retroactive, or only
'Doc
Points taken, but I object to a seller being able to tell me what I can do with my own property forever; IOW, he has "sold" the property to me, but still has some "control" over what is supposed to be MINE. After I have taken control, what I do on that property within reason should be no one else's beeswax. I happen to think antennas are reasonable! hehe!
Jerry
--
Hiya Jer! Let's get real about it. If one buys into a place with restrictions, too bad for you if you wish to VIOLATE those RULES in the future. This forum is a perfect example of how what constitutes "within reason" greatly differs among us.
When you buy a house in a subdivision and it says "no commercial trucks or vehicles", then you don't bring home the 18 wheeler or cement
truck with "Bill's Construction" on the side.
My area was zoned for agricultural not too far back...now I can walk to what is zoned as "business" on the other side of what is zoned
"residential", of which is shrinking. I must now garage one of my recreational vehicles/crafts at all times, as only one is now permitted per property owner. In other words, I cant have my camper AND a boat in my yard at the same time if it is visible from the street.

It wasn't like this just a few short years ago.
Even had a visit from a councilwoman to see if I was running a kennel...(business in residential = special permit) I was tempted to tell her "only on the internet" <g>,, but kept quiet. She put down a reserve for Christmas.
Using your stated input as a means of showing how well I understand your position, some that wish to violate those rules may say, "Well, I happen to think commercial vehicles are fine as long as they aren't BIG trucks."
Another point you made to draw from is "Where do we draw the line?" concerning the freebanders. To you, I ask the same. If we allow you to have an antenna, what next? You'll want a mast, or worse, a tower (gasp)!
To debate those rules that you would attempt to circumvent is akin to debating the FCC rules...as I point you in the direction of the many, many posts you reiterated that "The rules are there for a reason."
What's good for the goose.......

BUT, instead of DEFYING the laws, the hams are attempting thru ARRL to get the law CHANGED! That is perfectly legal, and I see that more legislators are signing on to support the Bill as time passes.

Jerry

I don't see Jerry advocating a "Free Antenna" Movement where everybody is urged to defy the law (like freebanders do).

That's because you are taking a topic with one person's stated opinion (Jerry's) and attempting to obfuscate with a generalization that isn't true, related to the topic, or in anyway has anything to do with what I pointed out to Jerry.

Lelnad was seeking input on how to get around his complexes antentenna

No he wasn't either, he was voicing his opinion and stated as much.

To debate those rules that you would attempt to circumvent is akin to debating the FCC rules...as I point you in the direction of the many,

The rules are there to serve the people, and can be changed and modifed

Never debated that process.
Jerry stated his opinion..go back and reread his first post..in it he wrote..."I think"...which clearly infers and conveys his opinion. I took issue with his reasoning, not our system of democracy.

It's done everyday. If you feel a rule or law does not reflect the good of the majority, you are free to work to change it.

Why would I want to change it?
I like it just fine the way it is. Sorta like maritime law...you can't gamble on the beach, but the boat will take you a few miles out to international waters and the law no longer applies as it does on land. Tell me, is the FCC going to come after me in international waters for talking skip on 555? Even if I pump it up a few hundred watts, you think the FCC is gonna come after me in international waters? Nah,,,I don't want the rules changed...it keeps hammies like yourself somewhat confined to the amateur bands and cb bands and off the freeband for fear someone will recognize your voice and turn you in.

Feeling that a law or rule is unfair doesn't give you permission to violate it.

Yes, that is but one of the examples that makes KC8LDO such a hypocrite.

This is especially poignant in the case of "freebanding".
-Aaron-

Actually, it's not. It's more poignant in the case of a licensed hammie seeking to break the law. Have a good weekend, in any event.

1735. Octal Plugs and more

Octal Plugs - like those used on older HAM or CB Bases for AC/DC/etc; wiring.

Have a few here to get rid of. They are all used and appear yet in decent useable condition. Some have AC cords or whatever attached, some don't. Limited supply on hand. IF interested, E-Mail me direct. Shipping is not included in the cost. Payment will be by Postal MO or Financial Institution MO only.

Other items on stock, trying to clear out. Too much to list. If looking for something, PLEASE ASK. The worst I can say is I don't have it. I DO reply to all e-mails.

Thanks in advance.

Lou/Tech@DP.NET

P.S. To save us both time. I do NOT have any radios that do CB/10 Meters. I do have some older radios though. Mostly mobile stuff. Some work, some don't, some parts units. Again, ask with your wants and needs.

Today's lesson is on sound alike words.

there - their - they're

there - opposite of here "They are over there."

their - possessive form - "They are their children."

they're - contraction of "they are".

your - you're

your - possessive form - "These are your keys."

you're - contraction of "you are".

I hope this helps to end the confusion. Next week , we'll start on spelling, and after that Capitalization & Punctuation. Maybe the missing Mrs. A. can help. ;->

"sound alike words": homonyms.

>there - opposite of here "They are over there."

Words with opposite meanings: antonyms. FWIW, 'raise' and 'raze' are the only two words that are both homonyms and antonyms.

>their - possessive form - "They are their children."

their - possessive construction of the pronoun "they". Using the same pronoun to refer to more than one subject in the same sentence or context, even if it is used with different constructions, is considered to be improper. In other words, "They are their children" is saying that the children belong to themselves.

>they're - contraction of "they are".

Using homonyms in the same sentence is not suggested. The phrase "They are over there" is preferred to "They're over there".

Maybe we should get "Mrs. A." to substitute:

That would be because of the abuse on this group. He can be found on the "CB Tricks" group, giving advice and information.

Giving honest information and help often leads to abuse on this group. This leads to many good techs giving up trying to help and going over to "CB Tricks".
This is just one of the things that made Dick so great on this group... he took all the knocks and never shifted off course. He could always be relied upon to give an honest reply, regardless of any pressure from different "camps".

A few days back, when returning home in the evening, I noticed a small antenna over the top of the other houses and trees. This had not been there before and it appeared to be placed between my house and the house opposite, so I was wondering what it was.

As I got to the end of the road, opposite my house, I turned to the right to see what it was.
It was only mounted on the top of a car !!!

The mast went in through the roof, through the rear passenger area, and was attached to the floor inside the rather small vehicle.

Peter.

I am not a big fan of some of the older Ranger radios. I have had my share of problems with Galaxy 99vs, Sommerkamps, Mirage 99s, and the like. I remember reading and being told once that Ranger had a premium line of radios at one time. I think some of them are still available. The Connex 4800 was one of them and the Northstar line was another group of good radios. The new line of Galaxy's might fit the bill as I understand they are running a pair of Toshiba finals.

I have also had many problems with the newer Cobra radios that I am told are made by Ranger. I have a 148NWST that I have problems with cold solder joints, low power output, and a bad clarifier out of the box. Also I have had problems with a 21LTDST and several cold solder joints and a bad SO-239 on the back of the radio.

Good luck and just be careful.

Ben

That is your problem. But the fact still remains.
Give it a break. I have already said I am not ice but, if you will continue that is your point. However as you tend to say you are deflecting from the point of the post.
You will never do anything to stop or even sow down what happens in the real world of CB. People are still going to keydowns and talking skip and even freebanding. So what are you gonna do now??? Call me another alias? Stick to the topic!

I cleared out my kill-file this morning. There were 50+ people dropped in their, most of which were bogus email addresses that were only used for a short time and have been long forgotten. I figured it was time to clean house. I'm looking for any and all "Anti" idiots to post a reply to this so that I can block the current list of morons and not have so much overhead.

Thanks a bunch girls!

another alias but at least have the deciency to leave ice out of it.
See ya later I know I wont catch you on the air but maybe you will be back here on this group under another alias and I'll see you then.

I saw an antron 99 mounted on the front bumper of a truck.
Looked ridiculous, must have worked pretty good.

Hey George, you may want to print Scott's lesson for future reference.

Train,

Thanx for the tip. Unfortunately, Gadsden is way up in North Alabama and Mobile is way down in South Alabama.

We're in a tropical storm as I write. Not to worry, I'm sure I'll find a good CB shop soon. Just don't much want to fool around with the truck stops.
